UNITED STATES ENDEAVORS TO FIX NATIONALITY OF ATTACKING SUBMARINE, MAKE FORMAL PROTEST

Labor Stirs With New 'Quit' Move

Action by President Is Awaited Today as Mediation Board Weighs Troubles

Tie-Up Feared

Threat of Strike by 1,250,000 Railroad Workers Looms

(By The Associated Press)

President Roosevelt's expected action in a threatened strike of 1,250,000 railroad workers was awaited today as the defense mediation board sought to settle a walkout of some 20,000 Alabama coal miners and several other labor disputes.

The railroad unions, seeking wage increases, authorized a strike yesterday (Friday) after mediation and arbitration failed to produce an agreement with the companies.

Under law, that strike authorization automatically placed the dispute before the President, who is charged with the duty of appointing a fact-finding committee to report back to the White House within 30 days. A walkout cannot be called until a month after the President receives the committee report.

Five operating brotherhoods are seeking a 30 per cent boost in basic pay rates and the 14 non-operating unions ask increases of from 30 to 34 cents an hour. A carriers' committee acting for 125 class one roads maintain the union demands would cost $900,000,000 yearly and that the companies could not meet the proposals. Present wage scales differ greatly among classifications within unions and among various railroads.

The non-operating unions, with some 900,000 members, set September 11 as a strike date and the operating brotherhoods indicated they would fix a date soon. Such walkout dates are meaningless, however, if the President intervenes.

The United Mine Workers, C.I.O., was considering, meanwhile, a request of the mediation board that an estimated 20,000 Alabama miners return to their pits pending a hearing next Wednesday. Cancellation by the U.M.W. of a temporary agreement with the companies, in effect since May 8, caused the walkout Thursday. The miners, paid $5.50 base pay under the temporary agreement, seek $5.90 for a seven-hour day and vacations with pay.

A strike of several hundred maintenance men at the Atha works of the Crucible Steel Company, Harrison, N. J., threw out of work some 3,000 workers employed on defense contracts. The C.I.O. maintenance men struck Wednesday in protest against what they termed "abuses" of working agreements by the company. They objected specifically to what they said was a company practice of shifting working days to avoid overtime pay.

Board Makes Request

The mediation board requested employes of the Kansas City Power and Light Company to cancel plans for a walkout set for today and announced a hearing would be held September 15 in an effort to settle the dispute. About 350 workers are involved. Officials said they sought collective bargaining rights in the overhead and steam distribution departments.

The board also urged 2,600 striking workers of the Pressed Steel Car Co., McKees Rocks, Pa., to return to work. The board promised a hearing on the dispute, which involves questions of representation. The strike started eight days ago. The strikers are members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the Independent Car and Foundry Workers' Union.

At Cleveland, Hugh E. Sperry, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, said last night that the American Shipbuilding Co. would be subject to an unfair labor practice charge if it signed an agreement with the C.I.O., which called a strike at the firm's Lorain, O., plant in protest against recognition of the A.F.L. as bargaining agent.

Represents Majority

The C.I.O. Marine and Shipbuilding Workers Union claimed it represented a majority of the 1,100 workers at the Lorain plant, and called a strike Thursday. The

Ulster Volunteers Choose New Officers

Freeman Photo

The Ulster County Firemen's Association opened its annual convention last evening in the Woodstock Playhouse, Woodstock. One of the major items on the program was the election of officers for the ensuing year. Among the executives elected were, left to right, Edward Moran of Kingston, director for five years; Charles Turner, of New Paltz, president; Thomas Ingaham of Ellnville, second vice pesident, and John Carnright of Saugerties, first vice president.

Tax Bill Passes Senate 67 to 5 in Three-Days' Time

Administration Backers Now Work to Adjust Differences in Vital Legislation

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP)—Jubilant over the Senate's 67-to-5 approval of the record $3,583,900,000 tax bill late yesterday, administration lieutenants strove today to hurry along the adjustments of differences between that measure and similar legislation passed by the house.

The bill, which would bring an estimated 4,911,000 additional persons under the income tax structure and thus raise an extra $303,000,000 of revenue, was rushed through the Senate in only three days.

Both proponents and opponents said the measure was only a step toward paying the nation's huge defense bills. The House ways and means committee has estimated that all federal expenditures would exceed $22,000,000,000 during the next fiscal year, which begins July 1.

Existing taxes, plus the Senate-approved levies, are estimated by treasury experts to yield about $13,500,000,000 during the next calendar year. Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate finance committee, predicted the total federal income would approach $15,000,000,000, however.

Two Concessions Made

To win fast Senate approval of the tax measure leaders had to make two important concessions:

They dropped a finance committee amendment, estimated to raise $50,000,000 a year, which would have prevented husbands and wives in community property states from dividing income for tax purposes. Such property division usually results in lower total tax liabilities for married couples.

They promised pension advocates that the finance committee would consider promptly a proposal to give $30-a-month pensions to all persons over 60. The pension plan had been offered as a rider to the tax bill.

Both the community income and the pension issues had threatened to develop prolonged debate. Democratic Leader Barkley and Chairman George (D., Ga.), worried because each day's delay in enacting the tax measure costs the treasury about $3,000,000 in uncollected "nuisance" taxes, engineered the agreements which made passage possible.

Because of a recess agreement, the house could not act on a compromise measure before September 15, and leaders said they hoped to have all differences ironed out by that date.

The senate's action in lowering income tax exemptions from $2,000 to $1,500 for married persons and from $800 to $750 for single persons topped the list of controversial issues between the two chambers.

Charles Turner Named President of Firemen At Woodstock Session

Annual Convention in 1942 Will Be Held at New Paltz; More Than 600 Delegates Present at Opening; Colorful Parade Today

Charles Turner of New Paltz was elected president, and New Paltz was named as the convention village for 1942, at the sixth annual convention of the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association meeting on Friday evening in the Playhouse in Woodstock. The convention closed this afternoon with the annual firemen's parade through the village streets.

More than 600 delegates and invited guests crowded into the Playhouse last night to attend the annual meeting, which was followed by an entertainment consisting of six top flight acts of vaudeville headed by the musical team of Fredericks & Collins with Harry Lester Mason as master of ceremonies.

William Fredericks of the musical team, is a widely known vaudeville star and has been a member of the M. F. Whitney Hose Company of Phoenicia for 30 years.

Highlights of the convention were stirring addresses by Frederick Snyder of this city, internationally known lecturer and news commentator, and James Deasy, retired fire battalion chief of the New York city fire department, who was in charge of the volunteer firemen's training school sponsored by the county organization, which was held in the Myron J. Michael School in Kingston earlier in the year.

The evening's festivities were brought to a close with the serving of a turkey dinner. Owing to the large number of delegates and invited guests it was necessary to serve the dinner in four different places, the new Town Hall, the Irvington Inn, the Brass Rail Tavern and the Sea Horse.

Other Officers

The other officers elected at the convention were: John F. Carnright of Saugerties, first vice president; Thomas Ingraham of Ellenville, second vice president; Francis J. Wynne of Kingston, secretary, and Harold DeNike of Saugerties, treasurer. L. E. Dunne of Kingston was reappointed assistant secretary.

The only contest of the election was for the post of director left vacant by the expiration of the term of Fred Lemister of Kingston.

Mr. Lemister was a candidate to succeed himself and the other two candidates were William B. Martin of Excelsior Hose, and Edward F. Moran of Union Hose.

Mr. Moran was elected. He received 161 votes; Lemister received 54, and Mr. Martin 74 votes.

Secretary Wynne announced that the October meeting of the association would be held in Clintondale; the November meeting in Ellenville, and the December meeting in Kingston with the

U. S. Has Allowed Hitler to Decide On Greer Attack

President's Order Decrees Any Axis Submarine in Iceland Route Will Get Trouble

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Freeman Special News Service)

America's answer to the submarine attack on the U. S. S. Greer has very firmly put it up to Herr Hitler to decide what he wants to do about it.

To be sure, Washington hasn't yet officially identified the underwater craft which made the assault. However, in Reykjavik, Iceland, where the Greer is berthed, it is said that the submersible was German.

One uses the past tense, "was" German, because officers and men of the destroyer say they dropped a depth bomb while right over the submarine and believe they must have damaged the craft and may have destroyed it. Just in case the raider did get away, Washington has given instructions that it be sought out and eliminated. One assumes such an order presupposes that the identity of the boat is known, or that any Axis submarine entering this zone is looking for trouble in stormy seas.

All these facts have been laid before the fuehrer by the American press, and certainly give him enough facts to work on. What will his answer be?

No Hair-Splitting Needed

We don't need to split hairs over the nationality of the submarine. Obviously it was an Axis submersible, and the strong probabilities are that it was Nazi because of the location of the incident in the North Atlantic. Now the attack must have been the result of one of three things: The U-boat was acting under orders from the high command; it was a mistake; it was an error in judgment by the submarine commander.

As indicated in this column yesterday, at least up to the time of this incident Hitler had given every indication that he wanted to avoid bringing the United States into the European war. This attitude was purely a matter of self-preservation. He probably hasn't been particularly concerned about having to face troops from this country, but the presence of a strong United States fleet in the conflict most certainly would have raised hob with his operations.

It still remains true that our navy might easily spell defeat for campaigns which Hitler is credited with planning for the winter. These involve the Mediterranean zone and the middle east, as well as the Atlantic. If he now has decided for some inexplicable reason to force us into the war, it looks as though he suddenly has lost the cunning which has enabled him to overrun most of Europe. You don't hang a stone about your

William Henze, 62, Whiteport, Killed By Flying Barrel

Highway Worker Is Struck at Kerhonkson After Collision Between Two Trucks

William Henze, 62, of Whiteport, for about 20 years an employe of the State Highway Department, was killed instantly on Route 209, about a mile south of Kerhonkson late Friday afternoon when he was struck by a 50-gallon steel oil drum which had hurtled through the air following a collision between a truck of the Kingston Oil Co. and the highway truck alongside which Henze had been standing.

Leonard Sickler, 35, of 133 Downs street, driver of the oil truck, escaped death when the top of the cab of his truck was shoved forward by the flying oil barrels, which were scattered in all directions. He was taken to the Kingston Hospital in the Humiston ambulance and was found to be suffering from a fracture of the right leg above the knee and an injury to his side.

Coroner Frank J. McCardle, who took Henze's body to his funeral parlors at Rosendale, gave a verdict of accidental death. An autopsy was performed by Dr. J. S. Taylor of Kingston and Dr. Alfred H. Feldshuh of Kerhonkson, by order of District Attorney N. LeVan Haver. It disclosed that death had been caused by a crushed chest and a ruptured heart. His left arm was broken. There was no skull fracture.

Sergeant John Hopkins and Trooper E. D. Croswell made an investigation of the accident, which took place about a mile south of Kerhonkson, nearly opposite the residence of C. W. Osborne. They found that the oil truck, driven by Sickler and loaded with 10 barrels of oil was being driven south when a front tire blew and the truck went out of control and swerved to the left, its front striking the right front wheel of the highway department truck, which was parked diagonally on a strip of the old macadam highway at that point.

A box of highway tools had just been unloaded from the truck. The driver, Eugene Yonetti of Kingston R. D. 1, was sitting in the cab and Henze stood outside about to get into the cab when the oil truck approached. He had stepped back, or was knocked back by one of the oil barrels which was hurled directly over the top of the oil truck. His body was found lying near the rear of the highway truck. Dr. Feldshuh, who had been called, pronounced Henze dead on arrival.

Sickler, who was able to roll out from beneath the crushed top of his cab, was ordered taken to the hospital.

Henry Yonetti, who had been standing up in the body of the highway truck, was thrown out by the force of the collision and sustained abrasions to his left forearm. Another employe who was with him in the truck, Aloysius Emmerling of Accord, escaped without injury.

The oil truck was towed to the Vandemark garage, badly wrecked. The highway truck, which was damaged in front, was taken to a Poughkeepsie garage.

Following report of the accident to the sheriff's office Deputy Sheriffs Vredenburg and Segelken went to the scene and took pictures.

Russians Admit Grim Defense Is Made Against Heavy Nazi Forces

(By The Associated Press)

The German invasion of Russia, finishing its 11th week today, was a story of three cities—Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa—each defended by all the steel and sinew the Soviet Union could bring to bear against the close-drawn peril of conquest.

For all three the climax seemed approaching.

The German high command, with a brevity that has grown typical of late, said only: "Operations of attack in the east are progressing favorably."

The Russians, admitting the steady force of assault, said that soldier and citizen armies were grimly defending each of the great cities.

Odessa, the Black Sea port whose history dates back to early Grecian days, was reinforced by sailors from the Red fleet and still stood encircled but defiant atop the 150-foot bluffs that make it a natural fortress.

The Russian government newspaper, Izevestia, said 82,000 civilian volunteers had ripped up the cobblestone paving to complete breastworks for a street-to-street defense if necessary.

Kiev, the mother of Russian cities and capital of the Ukraine, continued to stave off a semi-circle of German assaults which have endangered it for weeks.

Cossacks Are Busy

Wild Cossack cavalrymen, skilled with carbine and sabre in the military style of an earlier day, were credited by the Russians with wreaking continual havoc behind the German lines, lessening the fury of the modern mechanized thrusts of the Nazis.

But it was at Leningrad on the north, separated from Odessa by the width of a continent, that the battle raged with greatest heat and least respite.

The Russians said counter-attacks had hurled the Germans back a mile or more, and the Germans claimed to be no nearer than 20 miles from the city.

But already it has been under direct artillery fire for more than 24 hours, and the Finnish forces pressing down from the north said they could see great fires raging in the city which Peter the Great established in the marshes at the head of the Gulf of Finland.

The Russians said units of the 15th German Division had been

Report Says Vessel Was Nazi Craft

Iceland Sources Assert Submarine Described as Nazi; U. S. Sifts Evidence

Tokyo Is Watched

Japanese Action on Oil for Russia Is Closely Watched

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP)—An effort to fix officially the nationality of the submarine which attacked the U. S. destroyer Greer was indicated today as the American government's next step toward clarifying the incident preliminary to possible stern diplomatic action.

Although Washington authorities were tight-lipped on the question of nationality, word came from Reykjavik, Iceland, where the Greer put in with her cargo of mail yesterday, that the submarine had been described there as a German vessel.

Authors of this description which passed both Reykjavik and London censors were not given, but the implication was clear that the destroyer's officers might have gathered some evidence bearing on the vital matter of what country should be held accountable for the action.

Such evidence, if found conclusive here, would settle one of the two principle uncertainties still involved in the incident and, through diplomatic protests, might lead to clarification of the other one—whether the attack constituted a deliberate attempt to sink an American warship in what would amount to a challenge to this country's declared policy of keeping hostile craft out of the sea lanes to Iceland.

If such was the purpose, United States reaction appeared to have been made clear beyond doubt yesterday when President Roosevelt disclosed to his press conference that a hunt was on for the sea raider and American ships had instructions to "eliminate" it.

How a ship finding a belligerent submarine somewhere in that area of the north Atlantic could be certain that it was the vessel which had made the attack was a question which went unanswered in official quarters here.

Identification Difficult

But the obvious difficulties of identification promptly gave rise to speculation that the hunt and "eliminate" policy might result in a general drive by warships of the Atlantic patrol to seek out and, if possible, destroy any hostile craft operating along the northern sea lanes.

The particular submarine which launched several torpedoes at the Greer Thursday morning with such poor aim that all went wide of their target may, in fact, already have paid the price of its assult as a result of counter-attack by the destroyer.

An Associated Press dispatch from Reykjavik last night said that officers and crew of the Greer reported they might have sent the attacker to the bottom. According to their disclosures, the destroyer, aided by reconnaissance of British planes, located the submarine and dropped powerful depth charges into the very depths in which listening devices indicated the sub had taken refuge.

Meanwhile American officials watched the north Pacific today for any sign that Japan—after failing to stop the first two American tankers carrying oil for Sov-

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—A German communique declared today in connection with the case of the U. S. destroyer Greer that a Nazi U-boat fired two torpedoes at a destroyer in waters declared to be within the German blockade zone, but asserted the action was in self-defense against attacks.

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Germans acknowledged officially today that a German U-boat had fired two torpedoes at an attacking destroyer of unknown nationality in waters declared to be in the German blockade zone. The announcement was made in connection with the incident over a submarine attack on the United States destroyer Greer.

A.F.L. was recognized as the bargaining agent for the company's seven Great Lakes yards following an A.F.L. victory in an August 29 election. A union representative said about 900 men were idle, and the company claimed only half that number were on strike. The C.I.O. estimated that operations were 15 per cent of normal yesterday. About 1,500 Lorain workers are employed in building naval and commercial ships.

More than 1,100 miners at the Bonny Blue and Mayflower units of the Blue Diamond Coal Co. at St. Charles, Va., struck yesterday in what John Honeycutt, president of the Bonny Blue Local of the U.M.W., said was a 'wildcat" walkout. Honeycutt said the strike resulted from a dispute involving the company and Robb Gilliam, a miner. The company, he reported, transferred Gilliam from a drill crew to a coal loading job because he refused to work on Labor Day.

Negotiations continued at Pittsburgh between C.I.O. representatives and officials of four glass companies whose workers are demanding a five-cent hourly wage boost in the present scale ranging from 66 to 95 cents. The firms are the American Window Glass Co., with plants at Jeannette, Arnold and Belle Vernon, Pa., the Harding Glass Co., Fort Smith, Ark., and the Rolland Glass Co., and the Odamston Glass Co., both of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Unionization and better working conditions for southern hosiery workers was scheduled for discussion at Charlotte, N. C., today at a conference called by the C.I.O. American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

Cruisers Are Launched

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP) — In ceremonies at Kearny, N. J., and Quincy, Mass., the navy today raised the total of new cruisers launched this year to three and the total launchings of all types of war craft to 251. At Kearny, Margaret Mitchell, author of "Gone With the Wind", christened the U. S. S. Atlanta at the yards of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company. The launching had been postponed from August 9 because of a strike.

with the Board of Water Supply. He was assigned to the reservoir department under Department Engineer Carleton E. Davis.

From 1906 until 1913, Mr. McManus was engaged in construction work, first in the West Hurley section on the Ashokan reservoir, and later at the Olive Bridge dam during the most important stages of the work there, and later at the headworks at Browns Station where he acted as assistant to Section Engineer Winfred D. Hubbard, now in charge of the department of water supply maintenance work.

While at Browns Station, Mr. McManus helped in the construction of a section of the Catskill aqueduct, along which was located the then largest Venturi meter in the world, also the Ashokan screen chamber and the lower gate-chamber, the layout and construction of the latter of which involved the installation of several valves, a two-unit hydro electric plant and complicated piping system, the waste channel and reinforced concrete bridge spanning it, the aerator itself and considerable incidental work for superstructures, roads and landscaping.

Continues Work

When Mr. Davis resigned in 1912, Mr. McManus continued under the succeeding reservoir department engineer, George G. Honness, being assigned by the latter in 1913 to the supervision of construction of the two large reinforced concrete Spillway and Stone Church bridges.

While on construction work he also added considerably at odd times in the preparation for trial of various claims against the city of New York, and as a result of his transfer to the newly organized Bureau of Claims was requested by the chief of the bureau, Walter LeC. Boyer, to whom he reported in the early part of August, 1913.

From that time on Mr. McManus remained with the Bureau of Claims and following the death of Mr. Boyer was appointed chief of the bureau on February 1, 1919, reporting directly to the commissioners of the Board of Water Supply.

Was Licensed Engineer

Mr. McManus was a licensed professional engineer in the state, and a member of the New England Water Works Association. He was also a member of Kingston Council, Knights of Columbus, and of the Fourth Degree Assembly, and of the Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's Church. Mr. McManus was also a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Mary C. Cusack; four sons, John H. Jr., Thomas C., and Edwin C. McManus, all of Kingston, and Charles A. McManus of Quincy, Mass., and a daughter, Miss Mary C. McManus of this city.

Funeral services will be held from the late home on Johnston avenue on Tuesday morning at 9:15 o'clock and thence to St. Joseph's Church where at 10 o'clock a high Mass of requiem will be offered, with burial in St. Mary's cemetery.

U. S. Probes Raid On Navy Vessel

iet Russia—would attempt to blockade Vladivostok by declaring a "safety zone" across the sea lanes between the chain of Japanese islands which almost encircle the Siberian port.

Might Violate Treaty

International law authorities said that aside from involving the traditional American policy of freedom of the seas, any such action by Japan might be interpreted by Soviet Russia as a violation of the treaty of Portsmouth, which ended the Russo-Japanese War on September 5, 1905.

(In reply to Japanese representations against the oil shipments the Soviet union has already informed Tokyo that any attempt to interfere with trade between the United States and the Soviet would be considered an unfriendly act).

If the Japanese intended to take any action to prevent American oil deliveries to Russia, it was said, they missed the boat at the very start by failing to intercept the tanker L. P. St. Clair, laden with 95,000 barrels of high octane gasoline, which docked at Vladivostok Thursday.

A second American tanker, the Associated, was reported to have arrived at Vladivostok yesterday with a cargo of aviation gasoline.

Still another tanker was said to be due in the Russian port tomorrow or Monday, but in view of the precedent set in the cases of the L. P. St. Clair and the Associated, diplomatic quarters here believed no effort would be made to intercept the third vessel.

Ladies' Aid Meets

Highland, Sept. 6—Very little business was transacted at the meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Roscoe Wood on the Chodikee Lake road. The weather permitted the ladies to hold their meeting in the garden and Mrs. W. D. Corwin presided. Miss Laura Harcourt reported 12 cards of congratulation, sympathy and cheer had been sent in the past month. Mrs. C. W. Rathgeb said there would be a display and orders taken for Christmas cards at the coming fair and announced the cooking school to be held in the church hall September 29. This is under the auspices of the Mission Circle. Plans for the fair to be held Thursday afternoon and evening of next week were talked over. Attending were: Mrs. Corwin, Mrs. George Noeltnor and her grandmother, Mrs. Franklin Welker, Mrs. Harry Colyer, Mrs. Bertram Cottine, Mrs. C. W. Rathgeb, Mrs. Nathan Williams, Mrs. Julius W. Blakely, Miss Laura Harcourt, Mrs. DeWitt DuBois, Mrs. W. D. Bond, Mrs. Mabel Hasbrouck, Mrs. Charles Champlin, Mrs. S. D. Farnham, Mrs. A. W. Williams, Miss Julia Van Keuren, Mrs. Alfred Lane, Mrs. Chris Dohrman, Mrs. Charles Farnham, Mrs. Jennie Abrams, Mrs. Wood and her guest, Mrs. John Davis. Those who provided transportation were: Mrs. C. D. Farnham, Mrs. A. W. Williams, Charles Champlin. Sandwiches and coffee were served by members of the September committee.

In spite of a busy holiday Mrs. C. P. Ayres and Miss Gertrude Mack found a creditable amount of articles awaiting them at the weekly collection Tuesday afternoon. There were six and one-half pounds of candles; one and three-quarters pounds of tinfoil; one pound milk bottle caps; two and one-eighth pounds buttons; two men's shirts. The collection next Tuesday will be in charge of the women of the Presbyterian Church between 2 and 4 o'clock. Miss Nancy Ann Rathgeb sold 50 of the booklets on the Highland-New Paltz Day at the doll house showing in Kingston.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP)—The stock market picked at mild recovery straws today and again was fairly successful in specialized instances.

Come-back tendencies crept into the list at the start but considerable diffidence appeared later and closing quotations were well jumbled.

Several blocks of low-priced issues lifted the two-hour volume to around 225,000 shares, although dealings for the most part were sluggish.

General Outdoor Advertising "A" moved up on a slim turnover in the wake of a $2 dividend declaration on account of arrears which now amount to $6 a share.

Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck were resistant as reports were heard of mail order sales mounting. Talk of expanding profits for the oil companies aided Standard Oil (N. J.) and Texas Corp.

U. S. Steel and Youngstown Sheet acted well, as did Western Union, Consolidated Edison, U. S. Rubber, Goodrich, Kennecott, du Pont and Johns-Manville.

Backward were Lockheed, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Chrysler, N. Y. Central, Great Northern and National Power & Light.

Latin-American and Polish dollar loans showed strength in an otherwise irregular bond section. Cotton futures touched new 11-year tops.

Trapanio Returns From California

Trooper and Sheriff Bring Man Charged With Ballo Murder

Sheriff Abram F. Molyneaux and Trooper John Metzer of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation arrived in Kingston at 6:30 o'clock this morning with Salvatore Trapanio who will face a nineteen-year-old charge of murder, second degree. Trapanio was arrested in Sacramento, California, on complaint of his wife, and it was then that his family disclosed that he was a fugitive from justice. Trapanio is charged with shooting Joseph Ballo at Tucker's Corners on November 10, 1922, and since then has lived in Sacramento with his family which consists of his wife and six children.

Trapanio was brought back to Ulster county through extradition proceedings after he had refused to waive extradition and return to stand trial.

Sheriff Molyneaux and Trooper Metzer left New York by plane, flying to California by way of El Paso. There delay was experienced when Trapanio engaged counsel and fought extradition. A plea was put up that since Trapanio had resided in California for some 18 years and had rehabilitated himself and became a good citizen, having been employed on one job as a machinist helper, he should not now be called to answer to the ancient charge.

The plea that he had become a good citizen was challenged by Sheriff Molyneaux when testimony was offered to show that he had had considerable trouble with his family and that his arrest on a disorderly conduct charge preferred by his wife had led to the detection that he was wanted for murder in New York state. On the disorderly conduct charge he served 30 days. At the hearing not only his wife but three of the older children appeared and told of family difficulty over a period of time. Only the fact that no charges were preferred against him in previous incidents, members of the family said had kept him out of the courts long ago.

After the hearings had been concluded Sheriff Molyneaux and Trooper Metzer were held up for several days when Governor Olsen failed to sign the order of extradition. Engaged in radio broadcasts, Labor Day speeches and other official acts, it was not until Tuesday at 4 o'clock that the final signature was affixed to the papers and the officers able to leave with their prisoner.

The week's delay in California waiting for the governor to sign the papers permitted the defendant's arrival here just in time for arraignment next Monday at the opening of county court.

At the court house Trapanio was booked and placed in jail. He gave his age as 47 and his occupation as a machinist helper. His address is 43-38 Third avenue, Sacramenta, California. Born in Italy, Trapanio is not a citizen of the country. He is of small stature, being but five feet tall and weighs 125 pounds.

Olson Is Held as Driving Car Improperly Equipped

Early this morning John E. Olson, 19, of 59 Cedar street, was arrested by the police on charges of driving a car with improper license plates, and also without lights. Riding with Olson at the time were Robert Dressler, 16, of 65 Liberty street, and Floyd Krom, 18, of 28 Henry street, who were later arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

All three youths were held for a hearing later in police court. According to the story as told to Judge Matthew V. Cahill the boys had bought an "old junker" and had placed a license plate on it and were driving the car when Olson was arrested.

The trio and the car were taken to the city hall and the car parked in the rear of the building, and the police took possession of the ignition key.

The police paroled Olson for a hearing later on the charge of improper plates and the boys then left police headquarters and under the impression that they were not allowed to drive the car away started pushing it down the hill in the rear of the city hall and pushed it along the street as far as the vacant lot near the Millard plant on Grand street, where they left the car.

The trio was picked up shortly afterward, and were held on charges of disorderly conduct in pushing the car away from the city hall.

William Dugan of Newkirk avenue, charged with public intoxication, was fined $3.

Andrew Argulewicz of Cottage Row, Spencer Schoonmaker of Gardiner and Sam Thaler of Plainfield, N. J., charged with failing to observe full stop signs, furnished bail for their appearance later.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Tuesday marked the opening of the new school year for pupils of Kingston High School.

Although there were many problems to untangle, full time sessions were begun Thursday morning. This is unusual as in previous years regular class work with full length periods was not begun until the following Monday.

The registration was slightly less than a year ago, but higher than two years ago at the September opening date. The number of pupils registered is 1,746, comprised of 942 boys and 803 girls.

Friday afternoon the post graduates reported.

For the first time in the history of Kingston High a father and son are members of the faculty at the same time. The father, Milford Seaman, teaches auto mechanics, and the son, Glendon Seaman, teaches general shop in the vocational course.

Aidalas Are Held In $5,000 Bail

Anthony and Cosimo Are Booked as Witnesses in Racket Extortion

Anthony Aidala, 48, of 27 Boulevard, and his brother, Cosimo Aidala, 44, of 753 Broadway, have been held under $5,000 bail each as material witnesses in New York city, in the case of Joe "Socks" Lanza, former Fulton Fish Market boss, who is charged with extortion.

Mrs. Helen Aidala, wife of Antohny, was discharged. She had been taken to New York city with her husband and brother-in-law earlier in the week by New York city detectives as material witnesses in the extortion racket.

Word that the two Aidalas were being held under bail, and that Mrs. Aidala had been discharged, was received today by District Attorney N. LeVan Haver.

Cosimo Aidala is known also as Benny Coster.

LIGHTNING

Everybody is interested in thunder storms. Dwellers in regions which have them view them personally, with favor or disfavor. Those who've never seen one want to know how the other half lives. A Westinghouse expert has been making artificial lightning—just for fun, as it were, and to find out things people didn't know. He says if you're outside when a thunder storm is brewing, don't stand under a tree. Come into the house—any house, but the bigger, the better. The chances are the lightning slides harmlessly down over the corners where the water is pouring down, and if you're in the middle, you're safe.

Keep away from the stove, sink, fireplace, bathtub, open doorway. If a husband thinks windows should stay open, he's wrong. Shut them while the fireworks are on, then open for the sweet, cool, clear air after they are over. A current of wet air is a conductor.

If afraid, hiding in the closet doesn't help. It merely concentrates attention on the fear. Get a good book, or into a useful task, try to put full attention on book or task, leaving as little as possible for the source of fear. Pretty soon it's over and "it's nice out." If you see the lightning flash and hear the thunder crash, you are not hit. You may not enjoy waiting for the next one, but that one has passed by.

Some people love these works of God, some hate them. Others love or fear the wind when it howls or "whistles in the rigging." They are all normal manifestations of natural forces. The trick is to learn how to adapt yourself to them, then enjoy them and be safe.

TRAGIC FRANCE

Many Americans say Pierre Laval, a pro-Nazi Frenchman and one of the most reactionary "Men of Vichy," got what was coming to him when he was shot, and that the shooter was a patriot. But the kind of trouble with which France is afflicted will not be cured by assassination.

Poor France is torn apart by her conquerors and even the so-called "free" part is dominated by her foes. But her basic trouble is in herself. She still loves freedom, and nine-tenths of her people are anti-Nazi. But she did not and does not put liberty first, and fight for it as France used to fight against tyranny. She lacks the spirit of the Norwegians, who will fight and die rather than submit tamely to the invader.

"'Tis in yourselves deliverance must be found," said Buddha. It is as true politically and nationally as it is personally. France may have to go through another French Revolution, with all its horrors, before she is free again.

STUDYING THE PAPERS

Study used to be regarded as merely an academic matter. Young people "got an education" in the high schools and colleges. And the sequel was only too often, in later life, the mournful remark that "I once had a good education."

The modern idea of education, while not scorning the "academic" studies, is to supplement school work with living facts and never let the college and the outer world get far apart.

So we find colleges here and there giving practical courses in the art of "studying intelligently" and doing it in cooperation with the newspapers. In this process they study the papers along with their books, or even without the books. And there are suitable rewards for apt students in the form of free courses in college work of a more academic kind.

Here is a fine way to combine college with life and make the hop-off easier when commencement day arrives.

SELLING COAL

While "business as usual" grows more difficult, it is reassuring to find that selling methods grow more resourceful. A trade magazine tells of coal trucks that are equipped with horns. As they go about delivering their fuel, they pour forth that grand old tune, "Keep the Home Fires Burning." There are also truck horns that boost baby food by honking "Rock-a-Bye Baby."

Such methods, though, could be overdone. Americans stand just about so much of a good thing and then start writing to the editor about it.

PERILOUS HATS

The Philadelphia Medical Society is concerned professionally about women's headgear. The doctors seem to run into an unnecessary amount of automobile accident cases among their patients. And some of the more observant fellows say they can trace many of these accidents to one-eyed hats. That is, to hats turned down over one eye, so that the driver has the use of only half her normal vision.

Men have always wondered what such hats were for. They know now, anyway, what the oblique lids are not for. Driving requires the use of two eyes.

We get after "typhoid carriers" but mostly let fifth columnists spread their disease unrestrained.

PAINFUL SHOULDER DUE TO LIME DEPOSITS

When a patient consults his physician about a "painful shoulder", the physician's first thought is of infection or injury.

If the shoulder is more painful at nights, he thinks of infection present or recent, and an immediate examination of teeth, tonsils and sinuses is made, usually with help of X-rays. If shoulder is painful during the day and there is a history of a fall, the physician suspects the cause is injury. Pain may be due to arthritis following infection. This is found by the effects of movement and by means of X-rays.

However, there is another cause of painful shoulder now being found that is more common than was formerly thought. It is due to calcium (lime) deposits in the tendons of muscles around the shoulder joint and an inflamed condition of the bag of water (bursa), above the joint. These little bags of water are found at various joints—elbow, knee, big toe, thumb. If they get irritated or injured, conditions such as housemaid's knee and tennis elbow occur.

Dr. Boardman Marsh Bosworth, New York, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, tells of his examination of over 6,000 unselected persons, 5,000 employes of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and 1,000 applicants for insurance or employment. Of this whole group, 165 were found to have calcium in sufficient amount to show by the fluroscope (X-rays) in one or both shoulders, the percentages of cases being the same in the employes and the non-employes.

It was found that the number of cases of calcium deposits was largest among the women typists as having to have the arms slightly raised and away from the sides put a "stretch" on the tendons of the muscles about the shoulder joint.

Symptoms were present in about one-third of the cases only—twinge, hitch in dressing or doing the hair, sometimes intense pain. Commonest symptom was pain at night causing difficulty in getting a comfortable resting position.

Apparently direct injury—fall, reaching, putting on coat, moving a heavy object—is not a common cause of this ailment.

What about treatment? Should the shoulder be rested? No. Rest may cause a "sticking together" of the tissues resulting in a stiff joint.

Heat gives some help, but Dr. Bosworth recommends removal of the lime deposit by surgery as it gives "immediate, certain, complete, and permanent relief."

It is the role of analytical science to explore the field of biological problems and penetrate the barriers of the unknown; it is the role of creative science to bring about the application of the good things found on the expedition of exploration. This simple statement covers a vast territory. We are still trying to analyze a multitude of complex situations in the field of animal breeding alone with the hope that sufficient new facts can be brought to light to permit further improvements among our breeds of domestic livestock, including birds. —Dr. Hugh C. McPhee, Principal Animal Husbandman, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Bulged table tops, sticking wooden drawers, and warped ironing boards are familiar household problems in summer. Wood experts of the Forest Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture explain that, in hot humid weather, raw wood swells from absorbing moisture from the air. To help prevent this trouble, close the pores of the wood with a coat of varnish, or other moisture-resistant finish while the wood is dry—it isn't a job for a rainy day. Apply spar varnish to all sides of drawers inside and out and to the underside of tables that have been left unfinished. Wooden ironing boards are especially likely to warp from the moisture—aggravated by the heat of ironing. Cover all sides of the well dried board with phenolic resin varnish before padding.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

By SIGRID ARNE

Washington—It's been a year since Washington was in a mood to tell stories. The town has been too serious to award more than a bored smile to the out-of-towners who arrived with the "latest one."

But now, suddenly, there is a rash of ridiculous whimsies. They're not bar-room. They're just balmy. I'll pass on some of the favorites.

Bug-House Fable

Two men were sitting across a desk hard at work when suddenly in walked a tiny little man. He walked straight up the left wall, trotted across the ceiling, down the right wall, and then out the door without a word.

The two men watched silently and went back to their work.

In ten minutes the door swung open again. In came the same little man. He hurried up the left wall, across the ceiling and then down the right wall and out the door.

"Say, what's going on here?" asked one of the men at work.

"I don't know," said the second, "but he's crazy."

Pome

There's a new version of an old poem which is done with gestures, first dreamy and then irritated. It goes this way:

"I shot an arrow into the air,
"It fell to earth I know not where,
I lost ten of the cock-eyed things that way."

Can't Get Used To It

The Easterner, having his first look around a silver fox ranch, walked down rows and rows of pens, each with a sleek fox in it. He kept murmuring, "Marvelous, marvelous."

Suddenly he stopped and asked brightly, "How often do you skin them?"

"Oh, just twice a year," drawled the rancher. "It makes them nervous."

Luck Of the British

There's quite a batch of Hitler stories. One tells about him coming out of brown fog to ask for Moses. It was quite an order but his aides finally got him through.

Hitler came right to the point. "Moses, how did you divide the Red Sea that time?"

Moses hemmed a bit, said it was a long time ago. But then he remembered. "Oh, I had a rod and I waved it."

"Well, where's the rod now?"

"Now?' echoed Moses. "It's in the British Museum."

Small World

Then let me tell one that really happened, and to me. I had two tickets for the premier of "Sergeant York."

By 6 o'clock I realized I couldn't make the very gala opening. But I wanted the tickets used, so I called friends in the same apartment. They couldn't use them. So I thought of cheery Alberta Peterson on the apartment switchboard.

I called her and explained.

She sounded very pleased. "I'd love to go. You see, Sergeant York is my uncle."

SOUTH RONDOUT

South Rondout, September 5—South Rondout Methodist Church will resume services on Sunday September 7. Sunday School at 10 a. m. Morning worship 11 o'clock, the Rev. Donald Finlay, minister.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jeker and daughter, Dolores of Anityville, L. I., have returned home after spending the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Benz of Connelly Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Maurer of Washington, D. C., spent the holiday week visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Maurer, of Second street, also Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Clair of Kingston, their brother-in-law and sister.

Miss Alice Staats and Tom Leonard of Farmingdale, L. I., spent Labor Day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Benz and family.

John Bailey of Fort Belvor, Va., is spending the week-end at his home on Second street.

Mrs. Charles Kraus of Hornell, N. J. visited Mr. and Mrs. A. Benz, Sunday.

Miss Wanda Vetoskie of Ozone Park, L. I., spent the week-end with her parents Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Vetoskie.

Miss Antoinette Clair of Brooklyn is spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cole.

Mr. and Mrs. Hallett and grandson, Allen of Jamica, L. I., and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Evans of Kingston visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Benz of Connelly Heights, Sunday evening.

Green Pepper Cases

Green peppers make interesting cases for holding hot creamed foods or crisp salads. The peppers will stand up better if they are halved lengthwise. Discard seeds and pulp and simmer 5 minutes in water to cover for the hot foods. Serve as is but well washed and chilled for the salad containers. These filled pepper cases make serving easier for party fare.

Roosevelt's Revival of 1937 Court Fight Is Unfortunate Incident at This Time

(By DAVID LAWRENCE)

Washington, Sept. 6—President Roosevelt's revival at this time of the acrimonious issues involved in his effort to enlarge the Supreme Court in 1937 so as to get a court favorable to his views is an unfortunate incident. It will only furnish evidence to those historians who will contend that Mr. Roosevelt never admitted an error even when a majority of Congress indicated that they considered his supreme court plan unwise.

The President stirs up wounds that might well be healed by now. For example, he puts on record a denunciation of three decisions of the supreme court which were arrived at unanimously and which were voted for by such liberals as the late Justice Cardozo, Justice Brandeis, and the present chief justice, Harlan F. Stone.

It does not seem possible that the President himself prepared all the article which is just published in Collier's weekly. For it contains some misleading references to previous supreme court decisions. Thus the President's article says:

"Then came all in one day, May 27, 1935, a unanimous decision that the President could not remove a federal trade commissioner although in an earlier case, in 1926, the court had stated that the executive could remove any officer he could appoint, even one with quasi-judicial powers. . . ."

The 1926 case referred to was that of a postmaster named Mychs and the court said a postmaster could be removed by the President and certainly the duties and functions of a postmaster are clearly administrative, whereas those of a member of the Federal Trade Commission are customarily quasi-judicial. This was the differentiation which the supreme court unanimously made in comparing the 1937 and 1926 decisions but no hint of this distinction is given in the Roosevelt manuscript.

More disconcerting perhaps is the statement made by the President that he regards his fight to enlarge the supreme court from nine to fifteen members "as among the most important domestic achievements of my first two terms of office."

To proclaim openly that a chief executive who intimidated the judges on the bench and drove some of them into retirement by a radio campaign is entitled to characterize such a campaign as "an achievement" is to set a precedent for the future, so that whenever a president doesn't like the decisions of a court, he may seek to have legislation passed to humiliate such justices by putting alternates alongside of them to deprive them of the effectiveness of their votes.

Mr. Roosevelt justifies his strange conception of the executive office by the expression of a fear that if he had not done what he did America might have lost her present form of government through seizure of power, as under some alien forms of government. The President's exact words are important to reproduce:

"For this was the year (1937) which was to determine whether the kind of government which the people had voted for in 1932, 1934 and 1936 was to be permitted by the Supreme Court to function. If it had not been permitted to function as a democracy, it is my reasoned opinion that there would have been great danger that it might have been ultimately compelled to give way to some alien type of government—in the vain hope that the new form of government might be able to give the average men and women the protection and cooperative assistance which they had the right to expect."

Aside from the fact that the American people never had a chance to vote in 1932 or 1934 or 1936 on the issue of tampering with judicial decisions by threatening and intimidating judges on the bench, not a word about the Supreme Court issue being mentioned in any of these three campaigns, the fact remaining that Mr. Roosevelt feels he was justified in breaking down the independence of the judiciary because of a fancied fear of ultimate dictatorship.

What has happened since Mr. Roosevelt by pressure exerted in public forced the retirement of the older judges? The court today is composed of seven out of nine justices who came from Mr. Roosevelt's own official or unofficial group of advisers—the intimate members of his political clique. These men instead of judges from the Circuit Court of Appeals or from the ranks of the nation's best lawyers were chosen to fill the vacancies. And what have been the decisions by some of the President's appointees thus far? In one case the New Deal court ruled that an employer was compelled to give employment to someone who applied for a job because the employer may have had an objection in his mind concerning the union affiliation of the applicant. In another case, Justice Frankfurter said that although the statute passed by Congress didn't say a particular thing, nevertheless he knew what Congress meant to say. This art of supplying words not only to the constitution but now to statute law has emphasized the almost complete subservience of the court to the policies of the present administration.

What is much worse, however, is that the President in a public address in 1937 practically repudiated the process of amending the constitution in the manner provided by the constitution itself, namely by submission of a resolution passed by two-thirds of Congress for ratification by three-fourths of the states. Mr. Roosevelt thinks this method is too cumbersome. He thinks it is much simpler to appoint seven out of nine justices who will amend the constitution whenever they please. And the chief objection of the President to the Old Deal was that the court legislated in place of Congress and the people!

Today an oligarchy rules America and in the recent seizure of private property at Kearny, N. J., the President deliberately ignored the fact that the House and Senate each refused to accept a conference report which would have granted him that power of seizure in certain contingencies. If this manner of handling the executive office is not analogous to an alien form of government already, then the average observer has been deceived in his conception of totalitarianism and in his fidelity to constitutional processes. The President's article might have better been left unwritten in times when it is so hard to get national unity anyway.

Literary Guide

Three books on Ships of the Air, and the Sea—

Why publishers insist on inflicting on books such titles as "Outline of Air Transport Practise" I never have been able to understand, particularly when the material and the general subject is one that should interest several million young men.

But the title of A. E. Blomquist's new book is as aforesaid, and the volume is a neat job in spite of the forbidding title. It is, specifically, a 400-page mine of information on the airlines which will answer most of the question of those who want to get jobs connected in some way with flying.

It may also interest some not anxious to join up. Blomquist writes, for example, about the strange era in the development of our domestic airlines when carriers raised the price of tickets to discourage passenger business. They made more by carrying mail and express.

After Lindbergh's flight to Paris in 1927, the author adds, there was a rush to buy aviation stocks. It did not matter what the stock was, as long as there was an "air" in the name—even Seaboard Air Line railroad stock went up two points within two days after the flight. And quite innocently Mr. Blomquist [illegible] oddments. It always puzzled us that airlines bought fly swatters.

John J. Floherty's "Aviation from Shop to Sky" overlaps the field of Mr. Blomquist's book a little, but approaches its subject from a more popular angle. It is the story of the workers who build the planes, service them, fly them, and prepare the way for them—by which I mean the scientists who plot weather maps, study air currents, experiment on design and so forth. The book is very entertainingly written, and is illustrated much better than such brief surveys usually are.

And ships, British ships, come in for a wartime study by Capt. Russell Grenfell in a book he calls "Sea Power." This is a pithy and sometimes bitter study of the British navy and its function in this war which will interest many, and perhaps antagonize some.

Dolan-Smith

Ellenville, Sept. 6—A pretty Quaker wedding was held Saturday afternoon, August 30, at 2 o'clock, when Miss Margaret Louise Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Smith, of Eureka, became the bride of Lawrence Guy Dolan, son of Mrs. Myra Dolan of Wallkill. The ceremony was held on the lawn of the Smith home against a background of evergreen and hydrangeas. Walter E. Smith, the bride's uncle, read the marriage certificate and the Rev. William Coombe of Ellenville read an appropriate poem and offered a prayer. Miss Harriet Smith, sister of the bride, played the wedding march from Lohengrin. A reception followed the wedding ceremony. The bride was dressed in a gown of white embroidered mousseline de soie and a finger-tip veil with a heart-shaped coronet matching her dress. She carried an arm bouquet of white asters and baby's breath. Miss Gertrude Smith was her sister's maid of honor. She wore rose dotted swiss with a matching Juliet cap and carried blue asters. The bridesmaids, the Misses Reta Dolan, sister of the bridegroom, and Florence Seaman, cousin of the bride, wore turquoise dotted Swiss and carried pink asters. Donald Dolan, brother of the groom, was best man. Both Mr. and Mrs. Dolan were graduated from the Ellenville High School. The bride also attended George School, Pa., and Guilford College, North Carolina. Mr. Dolan attended Cornell University and is associated with his brother in the Dolan Orchards at Wallkill. After a short wedding trip the couple will reside at Wallkill.

Fallon-Mason

Ellenville, Sept. 6—Miss Helen Edith Mason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Mason, of Briggs Highway, and Gregory Fallon, son of Mrs. Anna Fallon of Ellenville, were married on Sunday, August 31, at 4 o'clock at St. Mary's rectory by the Rev. Father Thomas McGuire. They were attended by the bride's cousin, Miss Virginia Mansfield, as maid of honor, and John McInerny as best man. A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Fallon then left for Kingston where they will make their home.

Author of Play Acquires Work of Art at Gallery

Miss I. Vera Vincent, whose play "Rainbow on a Shoestring" has just been acquired by Clair Leonard with a view to interesting Billy Rose in its production, has just purchased what she considers the outstanding exhibit of the Woodstock Art Gallery, which closes a successful season today. It is a plaster figure by Hans Pawlak titled "Woman Progressing."

"I am delighted with my acquisition," says Miss Vincent. "In the first place, I feel that Mr. Pawlak is genuinely a genius in the bud. 'Woman in Progress' is literally breathtaking. A little abstract, perhaps, but it has a fine esoteric feeling of verve and space and speed. I think Rodin would have liked it.

"The figure in semi-crouching posture represents woman reaching out from centuries of mental slavery. The fine flowing grace of the hair suggests the speed with which she is mentally striving upward and forward."

Miss Vincent feels that universal peace, the Utopian dream of the peoples of the world, when it comes, will come through the concentrated efforts of the intelligent women of the world.

Mr. Pawlak is in training at Camp Blanding, Fla., and apparently worked on his sculpture during his hours of leave.

Cuba believes it can produce $7,000,000 worth of manganese a year.

There are approximately 155,000 practicing physicians in the United States.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personality of a House," "The Blue Book of Social Usage," etc.)

Another Military Emergency

Because of the number of young men who have been sent to faraway training camps, questions from brides who must go far from home to be married, arrive by the score every day. However, the following letter is extreme in the matter of distance:

"I am being married on an island far away from the United States, where my fiance is now stationed. I will go there because he can't come here for the wedding. Only his army friends will be present at the ceremony. None of my relatives or his, or our friends here in the States can go to the island of X with me. One of my friends suggests that according to Emily Post, we should send invitations to everyone, just the same, to let them know we wished they could be with us. I can see the reasoning of this ordinarily; but under such conditions, as ours, I think the announcements afterward, sent out by my parents in the States, would be more suitable. What do you think?"

I think the ordinary rule holds true. An announcement means our wedding has taken place and you were not (for no matter what reason) invited. An invitation means, we did want to have you with us if you could have come. For this reason, I can't very well suggest that you send announcements to your intimate friends. I think it would be better to write a letter telling them of your plans and the day of the wedding, and how much you wish they could be with you. After that, of course, if you choose to send announcements in addition to this, that wouldn't matter, because you already would have told them about everything.

Introducing One's Husband Or One's Wife

Dear Mrs. Post: When introducing one's husband or wife, to a social equal, is it in correct form to say, "I should like to present my wife, Mary" or "My husband Charles," without giving the last name? My friend argues that this is not correct, and that one should say, "I would like to present, or introduce my wife, Mrs. Brown," or "my husband, Mr. Brown."

Answer: I'm sorry, but neither is quite right. Never say, "my wife, Mary," or "my husband, Charles," or my wife, Mrs. Brown" or "my husband, Mr. Brown." You simply say, "my wife"—or "my husband". Anyone who knows your name will know that your wife or husband has the same name. You don't say, "I would like to present—" Present is a very formal word, and in this case you merely say, "May I present—" Don't present your wife either, to anyone younger than she and never to a man. To an older lady, you say, "Mrs. Jones, may I present my wife" or "my husband."

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad, however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "The Bride's Trousseau." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of The Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y. Leaftlets cannot be mailed unless self-addressed envelope bears correct amount of postage.

Sergeant and Mrs. Harold Follette

Miss Louise Meahm of 82 O'Neil street became the bride of Staff Sergeant Harold Follette of Stockton, California, on Wednesday, September 3, at 3:30 o'clock at St. Joseph's Church. The Rev. Edmund P. Burke performed the ceremony. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Van Gaasbeck of 83 Prospect street. The bride wore a light blue suit with navy accessories and a corsage of white roses. Her attendant wore a matching suit of beige with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

After a wedding trip to New York city and points in New Jersey, Sergeant and Mrs. Follette will reside in Stockton, where the groom is stationed.

Personal Notes

Miss Evelyn Dolson of Broadway and Ruth Holsapple of Saugerties have returned from a vacation spent in North Carolina and Virginia Beach, Va. They came back by the way of Washington, D. C., and Baltimore, Md., completing a trip of 1,200 miles.

Entering New York State College for Teachers at Albany will be Arthur Olivet, son of A. J. Olivet of 59 St. James street. He will major in mathematics and science.

Jerome Jaffe of Saugerties, who has many friends in this city, has resumed his studies at Cornell University.

Raymond Beach of Catskill was a visitor here Thursday.

Excess Speed

Judge

"You are charged with reckless driving,
And I'll ask you now to plead,
Are you guilty or not guilty
Of the use of excess speed."

Prisoner

"I'm not guilty now your honor.
He is wrong, that traffic cop,
I was only doing thirty
When he ordered me to stop."

Officer

"Oh your honor, when he passed me,
He was burning up the road.
And he left me 'mongst the ruins
Of the busted traffic code.
When I held the stop watch on him,
And his limousine of power,
He was simply doubling thirty,
Doing sixty miles an hour."

Judge

"We will try to save the honor
Of the busted traffic code,
And provide a way of safety
For the users of the road.
We will find the prisoner guilty;
He'll be sorry for the deed;
It will cost him seven twenty
For the use of excess speed.
It is fitting that we cure him
Of his wild and evil ways,
And we'll order close confinement
In the jail house till he pays.
—Harry Brokaw.

Mrs. P. My daughter is taking a course in domestic science.

Mrs. R.—How is she making out?

Mrs. P.—All right, I infer. She writes me that she has just made the scrub team.

Have you started cutting down your gasoline consumption yet?

Sidebottom—So you got rid of the depression in your town, did you?

Sowerbier—Yes, but it took more'n a hundred loads of dirt to level it up.

Flowers for Oscar

The gates were down but Oscar Shay
Decided, to his sorrow,
To speed across the right of way—
His funeral is tomorrow.

Doubtful—Is this butter fresh?

Certain—Madam, it's so fresh, it's positively impertinent.

A drunk who had boarded a double deck bus and stumbled up to the top deck, came rolling down the stairs a minute later with the observation, "I ain't going to ride up there. There's nobody driving.

Isn't it supposed to be illegal to drive with headlamps undimmed while passing other cars? No one would think it, driving at night.

Biggins—Is your son preparing for college?

Slencznski—Yes. He's taking boxing lessons.

Personal From Rural Paper

Spicersville Item—Action speaks better than words. Old Satan sure does get right inside some people and make his home there. We are referring to the case of the mean low-down rascal who gave a dose of poison to Jimmie Fordham's fine dog, who was a good-natured and harmless animal.

Today's boy, fuming at his chore of washing the car, may think he has a hard time of it, but he never had to sponge the mud off 64 buggy-wheel spokes in the pre-paved road days.

Cornell Cow New State Champion

Produces 1032.7 Pounds of Butterfat

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 6—A state production record has been made by a registered Holstein-Friesian cow owned by Cornell University, according to an announcement from headquarters of the breed at Brattleboro, Vermont.

Cornell Ormsby Kay is the new champion. By producing 1032.7 pounds of butterfat from 25,415 pounds of milk, she takes the lead for all of New York's senior 3-year-old Holsteins milked four times daily in the yearly division.

The average dairy cow in the country, it is pointed out, produces only 17 per cent as much butterfat, using statistics of the United States Department of Agriculture as the basis of comparison.

"Kay" is the 326th cow of this breed to produce more than one thousand pounds of butterfat in a year, the announcement says.

Messerschmitt Plane Aids Bundles Campaign

A Messerschmidt 109 fighter plane shot down over London nearly a year ago, its wings and fusilage pocked by machine gun bullets and torn by anti-aircraft shells is being exhibited in the principal cities of the United States to raise funds for the relief of bombed-out civilians of the British Isles.

This plane, which accounted for five British, Dutch and French planes during its short life in action was sent to America by Lord Beaverbrook, British minister of aircraft production at the request of Mrs. Winston Churchill, honorary sponsor of Bundles for Britain.

The plane was formally presented to Mrs. Wales Latham at the Hollywood Theatre at which time a British refugee child spoke of the destruction such planes have wrought. The ceremony was broadcast over Station WMCA.

Seedless Jam

To make a seedless berry jam, boil berries slowly with a little water until soft, then press them through a sieve to remove the seeds. Measure the pulp and add the required amount of sugar. Most jams use equal parts of sugar and pulp.

MADE UP TO KILL

by Kelley Roos

Chapter 35

The Fire

"SEVEN people were killed in the fire," Jeff said, "six of the audience and one member of the company...the juvenile. His body was found in his dressing room. And they found the door to that dressing room locked... from the outside. There was an inquest, of course, and the coroner's verdict was death by some person or persons unknown. There wasn't a scrap of evidence, there never was, and the case went unsolved. But it could have been solved. There was a witness. Eve North saw Clint Bowers lock that door."

"But, Jeff, why? Why did he do it?"

"He was rather reticent about the motive. It involved a woman who is still living. No one knew about that woman and Clint Bowers but the juvenile. He tried blackmail...he worked on both of them, and when neither could meet his demands he threatened exposure. And he meant it.

"Bowers never thought of killing the boy to protect himself and the woman. He wasn't a murderer . . . not in those days. He thought there was no way out.

"But, then, between the acts that night, a fire broke out in the theater. It was none of Bowers' doing. A short behind the switchboard caused it. No one person could actually be blamed. The flames swept through the draperies and scenery and in a moment the place was filled with overpowering smoke.

"Bowers slapped a wet cloth across his face and rushed to the dressing rooms. He found no one in any of them until he reached the top floor. And there he found his blackmailing friend groping hysterically for his door. In trying to save his wardrobe, apparently, he had waited a moment too long; the smoke had got him.

"Bowers took one step toward him and stopped. If, instead of leading him to safety, he shut the door and turned the key! The flames were gaining headway; the entire theater would surely be demolished. No one would ever know that the door had been locked. No one would have seen him do it. So Clint Bowers turned the key . . . and rushed out of the theater.

"He was wrong on both points, of course. Eve North, trapped in her dressing room at the other end of the hall, had seen him turn the key before she slipped into unconsciousness, overcome by the smoke. Bowers hadn't seen her, hadn't heard her gasp for help.

"And consequently Eve was left to burn . . . almost to death. The firemen got to her in time, but they didn't get to the juvenile until it was too late. And they did discover that the door had been locked.

Nest Egg

"I DON'T know if Eve ever knew why Bowers had killed the boy. But that didn't matter. She didn't have to present the police with a motive to have Bowers hanged. She had plenty; she had been an eyewitness to the murder. But Eve never talked. Perhaps her own tragedy kept her quiet. Or perhaps, even then, she was saving her knowledge for a little nest egg."

Jeff stopped long enough to beckon the waiter. "I've got to have another drink; my threoat's parched. That damn fire." He asked for another brandy and a large glass of water. "Now where was I?" he asked. "I wasn't listening to myself."

"Eve knew Bowers had killed a man and she kept quiet."

"When she got out of the hospital, despite her scarred back and arms that so few knew about she took up her career again. She became famous and wealthy, the darling of the early twenties. Then she started slipping, her looks were going, her youth fading, and she wasn't a good enough actress. She was down, out."

"Poor Eve."

"Yeah, poor Eve, she had to resort to blackmail, a very esoteric type of blackmail. By then Bowers was the white-haired boy of the American theater. She simply said to him, 'You produce for me, darling; star me, or else the whole world will know what young man locked another young man in his dressing room in the Detroit theater fire.' What could he do?"

"He could produce for her."

"Exactly. He produced for her and starred her, and ruined himself financially and artistically. It must have torn him to pieces to do all those bedroom comedies and bad French translations after all the beautiful stuff he had been producing. It ripped him to shreds. The theater was his life. Some people let that happen to their lives. Why, Haila?"

"Go on, darling."

The Limit

"WELL, finally it got him. It was either Eve or he. Rather selfishly he decided it would be Eve. He just told us that he looked for a play for two years that would give him a chance to kill her. Finally he found Green Apples. It was perfect. It had a drinking scene exactly in the right place. But Phoebe Thompson forgot to put the flowers on the table. Eve, the trouper, rearranged the glasses instead of the flowers, and Carol, not Eve, got the poison.

"Bowers dropped the poison into Eve's glass just before the curtain went up on the third act. And what he must have gone through when Carol got it . . . and when the play turned out to be a hit! He told us if Eve hadn't figured out the poison was meant for her, he would have let her live, because Green Apples would've made enough money to put him back where he could produce other plays, too, the kind he wanted to do."

I suddenly remembered, "When you went in to talk to Eve between the acts the second night . . ."

"Yeah, that was the first time Eve heard about the poisoning."

"And Clint was in the hall; he heard you and Eve; he realized then that . . ."

Jeff nodded. "Right. When I asked her why she had been fussing around the table, she knew that she had changed the glasses, given Carol the poison that was meant for her. She knew then that Bowers was out to get rid of her."

"Why didn't she run? For her life!"

"I don't know," Jeff said. "The shock. She thought she was protected by the twenty people backstage. She couldn't imagine any way that Bowers could have her dead within thirty minutes. She couldn't believe that he would dare strike again so soon, or at the theater again.

"And when the places were called, she took her place on stage as she had been doing for twenty-five years. Then Bowers watched for his chance. His first attack had been planned for months. This had to be one of the moment.

"That chance came at Eve's first exit in the second act—and everything worked into Bowers' hands. Eve, waiting there in the wings for her next entrance, leaned up against the scenery and the paint came off on her jacket. She whipped it off to look at it after she realized what she had done.

by
Tom MacPherson

Gladys Swarthout is one of the Metropolitan Opera's outstanding contributions to popular entertainment. Miss Swarthout is back on the air via the Family Hour, WABC's five o'clock Sunday offering.

It may be that the summer layoff substantially reduced competition, but in our opinion the best all 'round entertainment hour on the air seems to be Uncle Sammywell's own Treasury Hour.

Among other "maybes," perhaps the ever changing stream of established talent does it, but somehow or t'other when nine o'clock rolls around on Wednesday night, one way of not boring yourself is to push the WABC button.

Fred Allen and Jack Benny, ex-feudists, have "adopted" British youngsters. The "adoption"—arranged through the Foster Parent's Plan for War Children—being an agreement by each to pay fifteen dollars per month towards an evacuee child's upkeep in a colony somewhere in Britain. Benny's foster daughter is the two-year-old sister of Allen's four-year-old, also a girl.

Sponsors are the clammiest people, and a people that has been treated with the utmost decorum by the sponsored. But now, here's Morgan!

Morgan's whole 6:45 to 7:00 WOR stint can be enjoyable if you thrive on canned jive. A more conservative musical taste can still appreciate him between recordings. He crams in varied commercials, making each an integral part of his humorous patter—and 'tis an undisguised blessing to be forewarned just in advance of our entire armed forces wheeling into action for a cigarette.

Coming attractions for this week are: Return of the Charlie McCarthy program tomorrow night at eight over WEAF. . . . Dramatization of Jenny Lind's American debut by the Family Hour at five tomorrow over WABC. . . . A new variety program premiering from WOR at 9:30 Friday night. Milton Berle will emcee, and the cast includes Bob Crosby's Orchestra with Shirley Ross as vocalist.

40 HURT AS WINDSTORM WRECKS BUILDINGS

A violent windstorm which struck the Minneapolis-St. Paul area wrecked several buildings at the Soo Line Railroad repair shops in northeast Minneapolis. About 40 workmen were injured. Many coaches were buried when the roof of this building collapsed. Injured were pulled from the wreckage. At least six persons were hospitalized in St. Paul.

FASHIONS AND HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

The Housewives' War: 2

Stylishness Is Easy in England For No One Has A Thing to Wear

(Second of three articles on the difficulties of housekeeping in England after two years of war.)

By MARGARET BUNNELLE
Wife of Robert E. Bunnelle, Chief of London Associated Press Bureau

By Cable To (AP) Feature Service

London — It isn't considered good taste in England any more to be too fussily dressed, too nicely manicured, too perfectly coiffured.

Partly because women have been too busy with more important things, partly because many beauty operators have gone to war jobs and partly because beauty ideas are scarce and clothes are rationed, women have been going in more and more for utility and simplicity in personal appearance.

A submarine commander's wife who once spent much of her time in beauty parlors and fashionable clothing salons, and now is working at the Admiralty, expressed the war time Englishwoman's attitude this way:

Uniforms In Vogue

"In the first place, I rarely have time to change clothes between the office and parties, and even if I had I'd feel self-conscious if I tried to look like a Molyneux model among war workers in uniform, particularly at a time when there are so many who have lost not only their clothes but their homes as well."

The beauty parlors, where pre-war women spent hours leisurely trying out new aids to beauty, are taking a back seat. They are short-handed and so short of supplies you have your choice of eating your eggs or taking them to the hairdressers for an egg shampoo.

Cosmetics early became scarce. They are no longer imported from France, and the best known British brands are exported to the United States to obtain dollar exchange.

Hair-Do Regulations

When it was announced that certain cosmetics no longer would be imported or manufactured, many women rushed to stand in line to buy up supplies of their favorite creams, lip rouge and eye makeup. Now that these are running low, even those who still have them are using less and less.

Some women have stockings sprayed on their legs.

With so many women in war work, makeup as a whole is losing its importance. In some branches of women's service there are strict regulations about hair-do and amount of makeup.

A woman ambulance driver showed me the latest thing in cosmetics for the services — a small leather kit with powder, rouge, lipstick, mirror, comb, nail file and skin cleanser. She said it was a "lifesaver" for rushing from her job to social engagements.

Although clothes rationing created some problems, it has eliminated others by enforcing simplified wardrobes, and there's not so much emphasis on style. Many women are digging out old clothes to have them made over.

Formal Wear Forgotten

Everybody is planning her wardrobe for long wear, for it is necsary to figure out how to make your clothing coupons cover a year's supply, allowing for seasonal changes and for the things that wear out more quickly, such as stockings, lingerie, shoes and gloves.

Formal clothes have nearly gone out of use, and most entertaining is informal because people find it impractical to use their coupons for anything they don't wear regularly. Sales people say that now that women have to buy fewer clothes they are buying more expensive ones because they last longer.

Some women are having their legs sprayed with waterproof suntan paint in place of stockings, and others are buying curtain materials which are unrationed, and having them made into summer dresses.

Cleverness Replaces Clutter In the College Girl's Room

By MARGARET KERNODLE
(AP) Feature Service Writer

College girls put personality into their rooms in a way worth looking into nowdays. Half the early fun of school seems to be the competition as to who can fix up a room best and fastest for the fewest dollars. And it's chic, not clutter, that takes the cake this fall.

At Stephens college, Columbus, Mo., girls give a room that homey look for as little as $13.60. It all depends on what you want to spend, of course. Even at Stephen's it may run to $50. And that's not the roof.

Most schools furnish a dormitory room with two beds, two desks and chairs, and a bureau. Others add easy chairs, ocasional tables and even book shelves. The rest of the room is up to the occupants.

Decorating clinics directed by the school's design or art departments are increasing. Swap shops are popular spots for students to buy the extras which were sold back to the shop by graduating students.

Department stores are showing greater interest in collegiate decorations. One New York store went directly to the co-eds for ideas, and found that collegiate problems chiefly are in reaching agreement with a roommate about color scheme.

The store's decorator suggested that two Sarah Lawrence roommates settle the color scheme by a combination of their two favorite colors. Holly Hall likes red, her roomate likes green. One bed is covered with red plaid, the other with green. Each has a straight chair slipcovered in a plaid to match the spread. They hung a green plaid drape with a red drape on each side of the window, to gain a startlingly smart effect.

Other clever concoctions include screens painted to blend with bookcases, bureaus or beds. One store suggests pinning pictures on fishnet curtains in proper spacing to suggest a pattern.

Cotton is going to college in the big manner. A sun-fast, silver-spun cloth that is a cousin to denim is suggested. Bright plaids, calico and percale can be used not only for slipcovers, spreads and lamp shades but for picture frames, boxes to hold extra linen, plus all kinds of closet accessories.

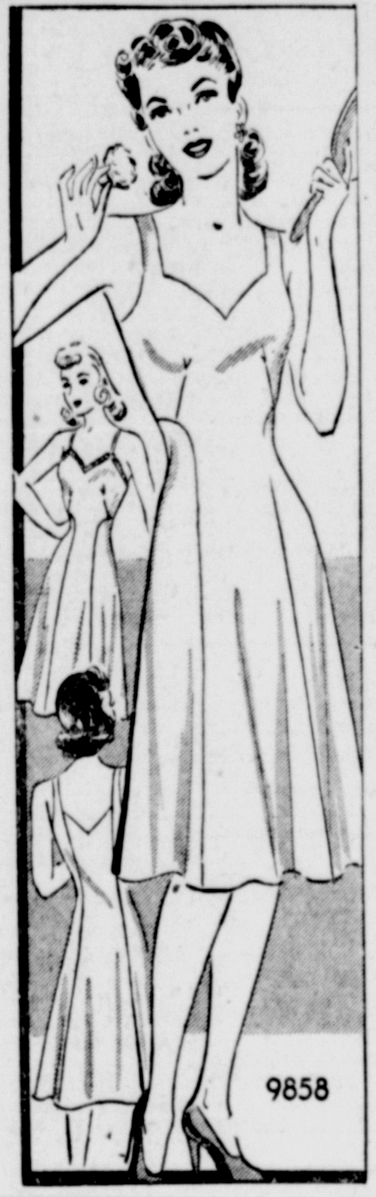
A Well-Fitting Young Slip

Marian Martin
PATTERN 9858



You never can have too many slips! Marian Martin has designed this style Pattern 9858, to make a flawless foundation for the new, slim, straighter frocks! See how the center-front section is cut to give you long, smooth lines. A dart on either side, below the bust, keeps the diaphram nice and flat. The shoulder-straps may be in-one with the front and back bodice sections, or they may be made of ribbon. The side-front skirt sections curve high at the waist for perfect conformation to your figure. The back is cut on smooth princess lines. After finding how easy it is to make this slip, with the Sew Chart's aid, why not make a second one in another shade?

Pattern 9858 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16, 2½ yards 39 inch.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

Save the Crumbs

When grinding crackers or toast, fasten a paper sack over the end of the grinder and the crumbs will fall into the bag. This saves crumbs from getting on the table and floor.

Double-Deck Filling

Sliced tomatoes, spread with ham relish make a refreshing filling for double decker or open faced sandwiches. Spread the bread slices with soft butter mixed with mayonnaise.

These Women!

By ADELAIDE KERR
(AP) Feature Service Writer

PEOULE get a little dizzy when they hear of Dr. Lillian Gilbreth's career. She has achieved fame as an industrial engineer, mothered 12 children received three doctor's degrees, taught management in colleges, served on national organization boards and co-authored several books.

Now, at 63, she is one of less than 10 women among the 15,000 members of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. In addition to her engineering work she is also a visiting professor of management in Purdue.

Dr. Gilbreth, who would seem to be a human dynamo, in reality is a pleasant, motherly white-haired woman with alert blue eyes, whose zestful interest seems evenly divided between her work and her 11 living children.

Dr. Gilbreth gives a lot of the credit for her career to her husband, who died 17 years ago. She had received her master's degree at the University of California and was preparing to teach when she met Frank Gilbreth, a Boston consulting engineer.

She was a quite a home girl, he a dashing, broad-shouldered bachelor in his early thirties. Within a year they were married and moved to New York. The next 17 years saw the growth of their dual engineering career and the birth of their six sons and six daughters. They had planned that many!

* * *

I was willing to give up my career for the responsibilities of marriage," Dr. Gilbreth told me. "But my husband didn't want me to. He was a feminist—more so than I in my early years. He marched in suffrage parades. I had babes and couldn't, you see.

"Gradually his interest turned from building to scientific management, where my training in the social sciences was of use."

In their big Montclair, N. J., house the Gilbreths set up a combined office-laboratory where they began their work as pioneers in industrial engineering, applied both to business and households. Industrialists employed them to locate bottlenecks and determine ways of speeding up production with a minimum of fatigue.

Dr. Lillian Gilbreth
Six sons, six daughters—premeditated

They also worked out model kitchens and laundries designed to save housewives' time and energy, and evolved a "clothery," a combined laundry and sewing room where all the work on the family's clothes could be done.

Many of the ideas grew from problems which developed in Mrs. Gilbreth's life as she flew from household tasks to the work of research specialist.

"When my husband first told me he wanted to have six sons and six daughters, I asked how on earth anybody could have 12 children and continue a career," Dr. Gilbreth said. "But my husband said, 'We teach management, so we shall have to practice it."

"He helped me in every way. Before the children could fall downstairs he took them to the top and taught them to creep down backwards. He helped in their teaching and in divices for shortening my household work."

In 1924 Frank Gilbreth dropped dead in a telephone booth and his wife was left to carry on the work and education of their children alone. She did both, achieved a rating as one of the country's leading woman engineers, and received two more honorary doctor's degrees.

Before our chat ended, I asked Dr. Gilbreth, now the grandmother of eight, for her time-saving secrets.

"First, get up early," she said. "Second, do long term planning—two years ahead or more. Schedule your main objective first and plan in the light of that. Third, learn how much time it takes to prepare and put away your work as well as to do it, and allow enough time for it all. Fourth, keep it a game—and don't feel too sad if you miss."

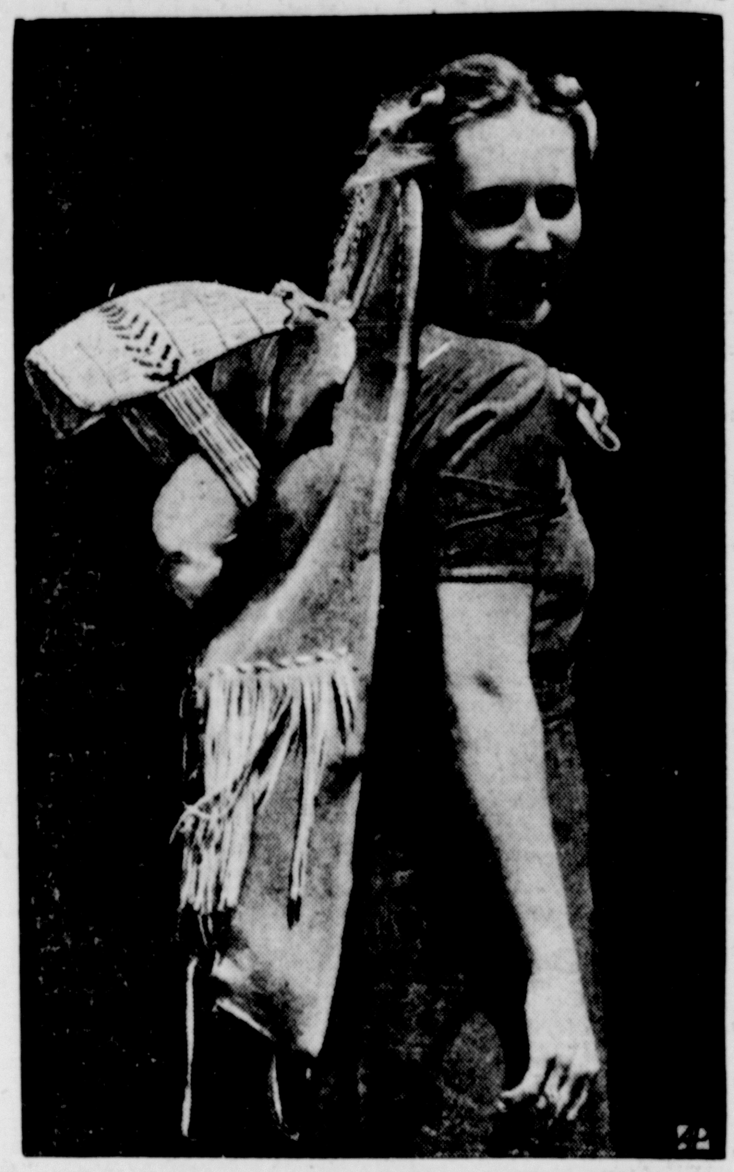
Relish Tidbits

Try this relish filling for tidbits to serve with long, cold drinks: Mix a cup of diced cucumbers with a tablespoon each of chopped celery, grated horseradish and parsley. Season lightly with salt and white pepper and moisten with salad dressing. Chill and then use as filling for buttered, white bread slices. Cut into small designs.

To Improve Muffins

You will find blueberry muffin flavor improved if you sprinkle a little grated lemon rind and ½ teaspoon lemon juice over the berries before they are mixed into the batter. Some folks like a dash of cinnamon in their berry muffins.

A Modern 'Little Owlet' Likes His Piute Cradle



Baby Jeffrey Cushing goes for a walk like this. His mother says he's been in the cradle board half a day without fretting.

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service Writer

San Francisco—Parents distracted by fretful infants may find relief in an old Piute Indian custom—that of strapping the baby to a primitive "cradle board."

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cushing did that with son Jeffrey just as soon as they took him from the hospital at the age of two weeks. Six weeks later they declared the experiment an unqualified success.

The Cushings believe that a great advantage of the cradle board is that it causes the child to grow up with a straight back. You seldom see a stoop-shouldered Piute, they point out.

This cradle board, made for them by an 87-year-old warrior at Wadsworth, Nevada, consists of a willow frame covered with elkhide. The child is wrapped in a blanket, then strapped down flat with thongs. A rush sunshade protects his head. It is decorated with arrows. For a girl a diamond pattern would be used. The cost was about $8.

The 'What Next' Co-ed Fashions Already Are Here!

Full skirted, flower-bordered and wrapped-around—that's the first robe choice of the girl who can have two. Gloria Jean, singing star, goes lavish in satin. Singing red pipings pick up the floral colors and contrast the white ground.

HELEN FORRIST HALL
AP Fashion Editor

It's our last gasp on back-to-schoolers.

Now they're ringing the cash registers with colored cotton panties!

Having weighed the item of the winter coat, laid in a supply of colorful campus togs and goofy accessories, you might think they'd relax on the undie topic. But no. They know what they want, they get it, and they're willing to pay.

Beneath their visible clothing, the co-eds want smooth-fitting underwear, and it must be either neutral or keyed to their campus clothes in color and theme. Durability and the laundry problem figure heavily in the fabric selection.

Girdles Come in Checks, Too!

A girdle is generally of one- or two-way stretch elastic. Very pliable, very brief. Nylon is a magic word and the girls definitely like detachable garters. They'll toss in extra coin for the garment they want. Girls with less lithe figures like the added control cotton fabrics give—such as sheeting, pinwheel corduroy and broadcloth.

Picking up their campus plaids and checks are girdles in repeat, usually cotton, for the lucky ones who can buy more than one foundation at a time. Whatever the choice, bras must go with.

Panties follow the smooth, brief lines of the girdles and are made of good rayon or cotton mesh or lisle. The lisles, at around 50 cents, come in a choice of colors—navy, red and aqua included—thereby getting along with our exacting girls because they can be matched to their dresses and skirts. Panties that match simple, form-fitting slips are liked. Blue is high fashion in solid colors.

One-Word Pajama Description: Snazzy

But when it comes to nightshirts and pajamas—woopee! They're plaid—they're checked—they're striped. Still, not everything goes. Elastic bands are out. Styles include butcher boy, lumberjack, blazer, with straight-hanging nightshirts a runner-up. And all snazzy. A plain white flannel nightshirt is patterned after grandmother's, with a long sleeve and embroidered frill for whimsy.

But a gal gets dramatic when it comes to robes. If she can have more than one, she'll fall for a beflowered or plaided or striped affair, usually quilted. If one must do, she'll still choose a sweeping skirt in a wrap-around model, but generally in a solid color. A polo coat type, in polo beige, is a favorite. The cloth, with short, bristly fleece, looks (as one girl put it) like "my uncle's hair."

Now, if you think the girls have left anything undone, just take a look into their rooms when they get set. You'll find they've done them up in practical cottons, with curtains and spreads that can be mailed home in the old laundry box for freshening.

Yes, the girls have taken over the fashion pages, the department stores, and have stepped smack into the designers' sacred precincts. They've handled their budgets well, and they seem to be handling business well.

Only a few years ago teen-agers were out of luck. Since such departments seldom paid, the choice of clothes was small. Today, thanks to the college girls' having taken things into their own pretty hands, business is booming.

Some stores report that back-to-school sales are up as much as 100 per cent. It may be fear of advancing prices, but the season has got away to a flying start under the rule of the young.

Tattersall checks, they are, in cotton to go with the tattersall tweeds she wears on top. Very scrubbable.

You Can Study Anything in College

AP Feature Service

While defense courses predominate in new fields of study added by colleges for 1941-42, the things you can sign up for are varied as ever. Teachers College, Columbia, offers instruction in the Democratic way of life, Pan-American arts, labor problems, and hospitality, etiquette and social usage—including how to set a table. Girls at Stephens College (Missouri) will survey the campus to learn engineering, visit the mayor to learn how to run a city, and run a bank ta learn accounting. Other examples of what you can study in today's colleges:—

WELDING: Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, other engineering schools.

BALLROOM DANCING: Is taught at Drake University,

INTERPRETATIVE DANCING: At L. S. U., many co-eds like this.

Morale Report: Army With No Place to Go

By JOHN GROVER

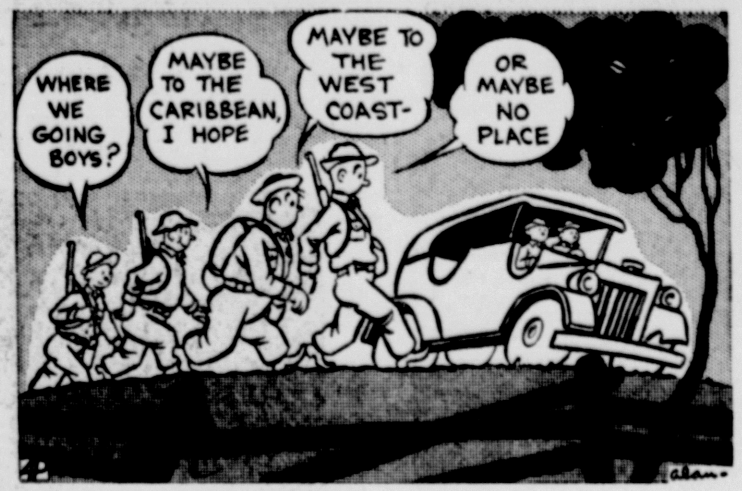
(AP) Feature Service Writer

NATCHEZ, Miss.—Cock an ear carefully when buck privates talk if you want to get the lowdown on this morale business.

On the motorized march from Florida to Louisiana I listen plenty when the boys are "beating their gums together." (Army for shooting the breeze.)

Some swear they heard outfit's going through to the west coast to relieve a regular outfit for Asiatic duty. Others say it's straight dope that they'll be recalled for Caribbean service.

What's behind these rumors? Wishful thinking. These young men want to feel that what they're doing is vital, not playing cops and robbers. Officers say the root of the morale problem is this country's ambiguous position—neither in nor out of the war.



WHERE WE GOING BOYS?
MAYBE TO THE CARIBBEAN, I HOPE
MAYBE TO THE WEST COAST-
OR MAYBE NO PLACE
AP
alan

Eye On Congress

National confusion obviously confuses the soldiers. The vast majority left good jobs on induction. They want to know where they're going. Uncertainty isn't so good.

From listening, you also get the idea they'd sometimes like a ration of barbecued congressman, served with a rasher of senators' ears. Isolationists and interventionists are both damned as political phoneys.

To prove it, they show you pictures of bitter political enemies grinning and shaking hands after a momentous vote on foreign policy.

"What the hell? You'd think it was a tennis match!" is typical comment.

Tired Of Playing

Shortages of equipment raise another important gripe. The boys tell you by the hour of materiel shortages. They're tickled almost pathetically when they do get modern arms. While I was along, word came that an anti-tank battalion would get an issue of 37-mm. guns. You'd have thought it was Christmas. Those kids had been training nine months. Not one had ever seen an AT gun.

The guys in ranks don't analyze reasons for shortages. They see powerful weapons in rotogravure sections. They want 'em. They'll be dissatisfied—with reason—until they get 'em. They say so.

Minor beefs: low-paid enlisted men still must pay for their laundry; sailors aboard ship don't pay federal tax on cigarettes—soldiers do; sailors are generally higher paid than soldiers; and they think FDR babies the navy.

There's a brighter side. Pride in the outfit is pretty general. "My platoon can outmarch, outfight, outshoot and outlove your bunch of farmers," is a common attitude. It's a healthy sign.

Morale To Spare

Here's an example: In June, the 62nd brigade made a practice march to Ocala, Fla.—120 miles on foot. On return, three miles from camp, they flabbergasted their officers by asking to march into camp in parade formation, instead of easier, sloppier route step. It was their own idea.

Why? They're part of the Dixie division. The Yankee division, from New England, is quartered next door. The Yanks had razzed the 62nd, said they "couldn't take it" on the long march. They wanted to "show" the Yankees they could finish full of beans. They swept up the camp street cocky and proud and chip-on-shoulder.

"Morale? Hell, they were busting with it," says Brig. Gen. J. C. Hutchison. (You get the idea he's near to popping, he's so proud of them.)

Sum it all up: There IS some dissatisfaction. Analyze the beefs, and they're mostly legitimate. Don't blame the army for it. If the whole country isn't sure of where it's going, how can the army tell?

Young Wisdom

Donora, Pa.—Ponder this one, brother editor.

Reading such headlines as "U. S. Destroyer Attacked" and "Leningrad in Flames," 10-year-old Billy Johnston asked his father, Clark Johnston, publisher of the Donora Herald-American:

"Say, dad, what do they put in the papers when there's no war?"

Hard Winter Ahead

Bethlehem, Pa. — Weather Prophet Herbert S. Bickert, who relies on the August "apple sky" for his information, predicts 33 snowfalls this winter.

He took time out from milking the cows at intervals to count the ball-shaped clouds moving by during the month. Says each one predicts a snowfall. He forecast 32 in 1932 and there were 35. Two years later he foresaw 29 and the total was 31.

Paper Wealth

Chicago—A 7-year-old girl with $10,000 owing her faces eviction from home because her family is unable to pay a few dollars rent.

Olga Lesiak was awarded a judgment of $10,000 after she was blinded in one eye when struck by a police squad car. Since the law does not hold the city liable in such cases, the verdict was returned against a policeman. He has no attachable property and as a city employe his wages cannot be garnisheed.

Just As It Sounded

Chicago—A busy secretary informed a telephone caller her boss was out, and asked, "Who shall I say called him?"

"Mr. Onderdonk," replied the caller.

Twice she asked him to repeat it, finally explaining:

"I'm sorry, but I can't get it. It sounds just like Onderdonk to me."

Second Woman Arrested

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—Federal agents today announced the arrest of 25-year-old Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer on espionage charges, the second woman accused of being involved in a spy ring allegedly operated by Kurt Frederick Ludwig, who was arrested recently in the state of Washington. The other woman, Lucy Boehmler, 18, and two men accomplices, have pleaded guilty. Mrs. Mayer lived with her parents in suburban Ridgewood, Queens, and worked as a secretary. A native of Brooklyn, she was graduated from a New York city high school and attended business school. She also had attended German script classes conducted by the German-American Bund in Ridgewood.

Babson's Reasons Why Hitler Will Lose War

Babson Park, Mass.,
September 4, 1941

Editor, The Freeman:

Letters come to me from your readers asking why I am so certain that Hitler will lose World War II. Of course there are many reasons, including Great Britain's control of the seas, the latent manpower of the British Empire, China, and Russia totaling a billion souls who can be trained and united, the tremendous industrial producing power of the United States when really awakened, and finally the great superiority of these nations in natural resources compared with Germany, Italy and Japan. Not being in any sense a pacifist, I recognize the importance of these and other material forces Preparedness is of vital imbortance.

Far more important, however, is the spirit of those who are fighting for freedom and justice. The "still small voice" in the human soul is more powerful than horses and chariots, or than tanks and bombers. As a sick man turns to God for help, so will the people of the innocent nations which the Germans today hold in brutal subjugation. I oppose and defy the popular belief that these subjugated people are "helpless" because their arms and ammunitions have been taken from them and because they are watched by German police. Hundreds of millions of people in these subjugated countries can and will pray.

The Gestapo can take the arms away from these millions; they can confiscate their writings and imprison those of them who speak for freedom and justice. The German military machine, even if multiplied a hundred fold, cannot prevent the Dutch, Greeks, Danes, Norweigans, Belgians, Balkans and other innocent peoples from praying. Ultimately, these millions will unite in doing this,—silently and unbeknown to their brutal enemies. These prayers added to the material sacrifices and efforts which all of us must make will bring victory. The two combined have never been known to fail.

All nations are now praying that their armies may be victorious; but such prayers may be selfish and, if so, are of no avail. Both sides in every war ask God to give them victory! This has not amounted to much. Today, however, a great third group of victimized neutrals are involved whose prayers will count. The great spiritual awakening which I have long been forecasting is coming. It may be born, however,—not in the American and English Churches as I had hoped—but in the souls of the downtrodden millions of Europe, Asia and Africa. Yes, I am a radiant optimist as to the ultimate outcome of this war and the better world which is to follow.

September Term To Open Monday

Seventy-Two Civil Cases Listed on Calendar

County Judge J. Edward Conway will convene the September trial term of county court Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The civil calendar with seventy-one cases is one of the largest in some time.

The grand jury will begin deliberations under the direction of District Attorney Haver and it is expected that Mr. Haver will present for arraignment on Monday afternoon Salvatore Trapanio, alias John Lobua, who was recently returned from California. Trapanio will be arraigned on a murder second degree charge, which charges he shot Joseph Ballo at Tucker's Corners on November 10, 1922.

The civil calendar will be called at 2 o'clock in the supervisor's rooms by the clerk of the court and a day calendar will be made up for Monday, September 15, when Judge Conway will take up civil matters. The call of the civil calendar will be in the supervisor's rooms on the first floor of the court house while the grand and trial jurors will be polled in the regular manner in the court room and excuses heard.

Inmate of Napanoch Petitions for Release

Theodore Palin, negro inmate of the Napanoch Institution for Mental Defectives, was brought before Justice Bergan in special term of Supreme Court Friday and asked for his discharge. Palin said that he was originally sentenced in 1931 and had served his maximum term in the institution. He told the justice that he was paroled in 1934, but in 1940 was again taken into custody. It developed that his offense was the possession of a gun, but Palin claimed that he did not own the gun but was holding it as security for a loan to a friend.

Apparently Palin's record has been good, with the exception of the incident referred to Psychiatrist Max Cooper told Justice Bergan that Palin was being taught a trade and might be "rehabilitated" within two or three years. Palin was remanded to the institution.

Argument was heard in the matter of Peter and Louise L. Meyer against Sophie May Pedrick, Josephine D. Schultz and Laura Pim, a motion for summary judgment in foreclosure proceedings. Attorney Floyd Powell appeared for the plaintiffs and John R. Seaman of Highland argued the case for the defendants. Seamon referred to the foreclosure action as a "friendly" proceeding, but asked for an adjournment on the ground that certain interested parties had not been served. Justice Bergan found for the plaintiffs.

President Visits Mother

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt returned home from an abbreviated week in the national capital today to visit his 86-year-old mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt. The President arrived here by special train this morning and motored immediately to the family home overlooking the Hudson, where his mother was waiting. She had been spending the summer at Campo Bello, New Brunswick, and had not seen her son for weeks. Mrs. Roosevelt will observe her 87th birthday September 21, and, while she has been in remarkably good health, the chief executive wanted her to undergo a physical check-up while he was home.

To Hold Clambake

Tomorrow, rain or shine, Kingston Lodge, No. 550, B. P. O. E. Elks will hold its annual clambake at Walton's Grove on Lucas avenue turnpike. The activities will start with a steak breakfast at 11 o'clock in the morning. All men of the county are welcome.

Ancient Letter Requests Bounty for Indian Scalp

HARRISBURG, PA.—From a faded old manuscript in the archives division of the state library comes this 184-year-old complaint from an American pioneer woman.

A letter sent by Mrs. Margery Mitchell, Shippensburg, to the secretary of the governor's council in 1757, complains that although she had made a "fatiguing and expensive" journey to Philadelphia, she had not yet received a bounty for the "Indian Scalp" she had delivered.

"One might think Common humanity would induce the Gentlemen to allow me some small matter on that occasion, especially as I lost my husband & Son," Mrs. Mitchell's letter continues, "and much time from my housework."

History of the incident ends with the letter, so there is no indication of whether Mrs. Mitchell received the bounty or not. Officials are not looking for the scalp.

U. S. Has Allowed Hitler to Decide On Greer Attack

neck when you enter a diving contest.

It Will Be Surprising

Therefore it will be surprising if the Nazi leader is deliveratelyseeking to force the issue with us at this precise juncture. Thus while the Greer affair has created a delicate situation, there is no present indication that it need lead to war. In this connection Senator Lee of Oklahoma made a statement in which he said in part:

"We intend to deliver the goods and if any more obstacles get in our way they can expect to be shot at. I don't think the recent incident will lead to a declaration of war."

By the way:

My very Scotch friend Sandy Machrihanish, of Aberdeen, calls attention to the fact that the London press cites the attack on the Greer as an argument for our entrance into the war. Sandy, who frequently has a somewhat vinegarish outlook on the affairs of the Sassenachs, as he persists in calling the English, makes this comment:

"If the Sassenachs could harness the energy they use in trying to persuade the United States to get into the war, they would have power enough to run all the munitions factories in England.

repelled with 700 dead, but did not specify the location. Seizure of 18 cannon, eight howitzers and other equipment was reported by the Soviet communique.

Finns Call City Doomed

The Finnish communique described the old capital of Russia's czars and the birthplace of the Red revolution as a city doomed, and said hunger and sickness stalked its millions, every one of whom able to bear arms had been called into the fight to stave off assault.

The British announced continued success for their invigorated submarine campaign in the Mediterranean with the sinking of the 11,398-ton Italian Esperia, possibly a troop transport, off Tripoli; and a 4,000-ton vessel of a type used as a commerce raider, between Taranto and Bengasi.

In Paris the German army of occupation announced summary execution of three French hostages in reprisal for an attack on a German sergeant last Wednesday.

In Vichy the French government experienced another alteration, Vice Premier Darlan getting more power by taking over Marshal Petain's administrative service. General Henri Dentz, returning from British custody in Syria, was expected to head a new general staff for French national defense.

Iceland Has Become Area Bristling With Big Guns

Defenses of Island Have Grown Amazingly in Recent Months, Observer Says

By DREW MIDDLETON

Reykjavik, Iceland, Sept 6 (AP)—Within a few short months this Atlantic ocean island has been turned into a United States-British Gibraltar of the north.

Iceland bristles today with guns, airfields dot the countryside and warships of America and Britain comb surrounding water in ever-watchful patrols.

Newly-arrived observers are impressed at once with the defenses of this keystone in a communications arch over which arms and materials pass from America to Great Britain. Gibraltar itself and Malta in the Mediterranean are scarecely more strongly-held than this barren land, which is half again the size of Ireland.

Censorship, of course, will not permit disclosure of the number of men or the amount of equipment here, but it can be said that the American, British and Norwegian forces on the island exceed the number of trained troops Britain had to repel invasion in the summer of 1940.

United States Marines in olive-green uniforms occupy an important place in Iceland's defense plans. Their guns and tanks have taken up positions alongside the British.

The British appear to have great respect for the marines, who settled on the island as though it were the most natural place in the world to be.

In planning the defenses of Iceland no possibility has been overlooked.

The island is within range of troop-carrying planes based on the European continent, and the long nights would afford protection for a hostile flotilla creeping down past Greenland to effect a landing in the north.

American and British officers have studied these problems, and have made their plans accordingly.

So well have these forces done their work that submarine sinkings in this part of the Atlantic have dropped to a new low. One report has it that not a single merchant ship has gone down along the northern route from the United States to Great Britain in the past seven weeks.

Auxiliary to Meet

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Elks will be held Monday evening, September 8, at 8 o'clock. A group of girls will give a few musical selections under the leadership of Mrs. Donald Parrish, also the Exalted Ruler, Vincent Connelly will give a short talk. A large attendance is desired. The hostesses for the evening will be Mrs. Edward Henry, Mrs. Donald Parrish and Mrs. George Logan.

PROCLAMATION

The People of the State of New York, by the grace of God free and independent: To the Sheriff of the County of Ulster, Greeting:—We command you that you summon to be and appear at a term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to be held by a Justice of the Supreme Court, at the Court House, in Kingston, in and for the County of Ulster, on the first Monday of October, 1941, the several persons who shall have been drawn to serve as Grand and Petit Jurors at the said court. And we further command you to bring before the said court all prisoners then being in the jail of the said County of Ulster, together with all the processes and proceedings any way concerning them in your hands. And we further command you to make proclamation in the manner prescribed by law, notifying all persons bound to appear at the said court, by recognizance or otherwise, to appear thereat, and requiring all Justices of the Peace, Coroners and other officers who have taken any recognizance for the appearance of any person at the said court, or who have taken any inquisition, or the examination of any prisoner or witness, to return such recognizances, inquisitions and examinations, to the said court on the opening thereof on the first day of its sitting, and have then and there this precept.

Witness, Hon. HARRY E. SCHIRICK, one of the Justices of our Supreme Court, at the Court House, in Kingston, in said County, the 5th day of September, 1941.

N. LE VAN HAVER
District Attorney

In pursuance to the above precept, I hereby make proclamation that a term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York and Jail Delivery will be held at the Court House in Kingston, in and for the County of Ulster, on the 1st Monday of October next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day; and all persons who will prosecute against persons confined in the jail of said County are required to be then and there present, to proceed as may be just; and all persons bound to appear at the said court, by recognizance or otherwise, are required to appear thereat; and all Justices of the Peace, Coroners or other officers who may have taken any recognizance for the appearance of any person at the said court, or who may have taken any inquisition, or the examination of any prisoner or witness, are required to return such recognizance, inquisition and examination, to the said court, at the opening thereof, and on the first day of the sitting thereof, and to be then and there present with their rolls and records, indictments and remembrances, to do those things which to their offices pertain.—Dated, City of Kingston, September 5th, 1941.

Leonard Dobson Is Still Leading Rich Golf Field

Missourian Adds Fine 68 to His Record; Nelson in With Score of 69 to Follow

Chicago, Sept. 6 (AP)—Golf fans, meet the young man from the Ozarks, Leonard Dodson, a swashbuckling vagabond of the bunkers who'll bet you on anything, any time, anywhere — and probably make you like it.

He's the laughing boy of professional golf today, for he's leading the $11,000 Tam O'Shanter golf championship field with a 36-hole total of 133—and has a great chance to come in tomorrow night with the $2,000 first prize money.

"I love a bet," he smiled, with a twinkle in his blue eyes, then added quickly, "if the odds are right."

They've been right many times for this quick thinking Missourian. Two years ago he won $500 when a Miami player wagered—at 4 to 1 odds—that Dodson couldn't beat him at match play blindfolded. With his opponent tying the handkerchief before each shot, Dodson won 4 and 3.

"I won $1,800 in 1938 at St. Augustine playing on one leg," he continued. "I took a lot of bets that I could shoot 76 or better. I had a neat 70, two under par. They didn't know I'd been practicing on one leg for years. It's an easy trick if you can acquire balance."

Three Under Record

Dodson, who had a seven under par 65 in the opening round, added a fine 68 to his record yesterday for a 133 total that is only three shots under the P.G.A. scoring record. Three shots back, as the field headed into today's third round of 18 holes, was Byron Nelson of Toledo, who had a 69 yesterday for a 136 aggregate.

Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., leading money winner of the year, blazed his way back into the big money picture with a second round 66 for a 139 total, one shot ahead of the 140 aggregates held by Al Huske, Dekalb, Ill., who had a second round 71, and Henry Ransom of Forth Worth, Texas, who held a pair of 70's.

In all, 18 players bettered par of 144 for the 36 holes, among them Vic Ghezzi, the P.G.A. champion, who was at 142. Craig Wood, national open champion, had a second round 74 for a two-day total of 145, the same figure turned in by Lawson Little, 1940 national open king.

YANKS WHOOP IT UP AFTER CLINCHING PENNANT

Temporary Halt in Race For National League Flag; Reds, Pirates Divide Two

Durocher Makes Plans for Coming Series in St. Louis; Chisox Lose

(By The Associated Press)

These are the dog days in baseball.

One pennant has been won. The other race has narrowed down to two teams. Kids you never heard of are getting their chance in big league lineups. And open dates keep more teams idle than there are playing on any given day.

This is just a temporary letdown, of course—all of the clubs go back into the trenches today—but it has provided a pause for consideration of the three weeks that remain of the season. The rest of the show will be a close-up of the National League stars—the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals.

Otherwise, there remain only a few minor conflicts to be straightened out—matters like the tie of the Boston Red Sox and Chicago White Sox for second place in the American League and the struggle between the Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates for their place in the national.

Brooklyn battles the New York Giants today in one game and tomorrow in two. The Cards have the Cincinnati Reds on their hands for the same schedule.

Tuesday the last intersectional warfare of the season will get underway, and two days later the Cards and Dodgers will get at each other's throats once more.

The three games these teams will play at St. Louis Thursday, Friday and Saturday might go a long way toward settling things. They're the games everybody is waiting for.

Leo Durocher is grooming his Dodger pitching staff for them. Fred Fitzsimmons, fat and 40, is slated to pitch the first game and won't work until then. He beat the Cards with a magnificent relief job July 31 in St. Louis and pitched shutout ball against them for six innings August 26 only to lose because of errors.

Whitlow Wyatt will work the second contest and Curt Davis the third, both getting a grooming in the series this week-end with the Giants.

Billy Southworth will counter with Ernie White and Howard Pollet in the first two engagements and, if these two lefthanders get along all right, he may throw another southpaw, Max Lanier, at the Dodgers in the final tilt.

After the east-west skirmishing, Brooklyn will have six games with the Phillies and two with the Boston Braves. During the same period the Cards will oppose the Chicago Cubs five times and the Pittsburgh Pirates four.

The Pirates split a doubleheader with Cincinnati yesterday to stay a half game out of third place. In the opener Eddie Joost hit a homer with the bases loaded to climax Cincinnati's eight-run rally in the eighth inning and give Paul Derringer a 10-4 victory. In the nightcap, which rain abbreviated to seven innings, Lloyd Dietz pitched six-hit ball for a 1-0 triumph over Ray Starr, who allowed only five hits in his debut with the Reds. However, they included a single by Alf Anderson and a double by Bob Elliott in the sixth.

Elden Auker pitched a five-hitter as the St. Louis Browns beat the White Sox, 3-1, last night to toss Chicago back into a tie with Boston. It was St. Louis' fifth straight victory in the past week over the Sox.

CITY SOFTBALL LEAGUE

7th Ward Wins

Tuesday evening at Hasbrouck Park the 7th Ward softball team defeated the Buicks' 8 to 0 with Ed Norton, the 7th Ward hurler pitching his first no-hit game of his career. Townsend, the losing hurler, allowed 10 hits.

Wednesday evening by beating Wimpies 4 to 0 the 7th Ward finished the second half of the City League in first place. R. Smith allowing two hits hung up his 20th victory of the season. Enright on the mound for Wimpies allowed three hits. The first four innings were scoreless for both sides with 12 men up and 12 men down. Then in the fifth Joe Kozlowski got a free ticket, stole second and scored on an error by the catcher. This followed by three hits and an error gave the 7th Ward three more runs. In their last two games the 7th Ward hurlers allowed but two hits an no runs.

The score:

Federation Softball

Port Ewen Protests

The first game of the Clinton Avenue-First Baptist playoff for the championship of the Men's Federation Softball League has been postponed pending the decision now in the hands of the board of directors.

Following the announcement that the Baptists had been awarded a victory by forfeit over Port Ewen in Thursday's game, members of the Port Ewen softball aggregation submitted a protest. As soon as this discussion has been cleared, the first game of the final playoff will be held or else the final of the Baptist-Port Ewen series.

Helen Jacobs Will Tangle In Dramatic Match Today

California Ace to Meet Mrs. Palfrey Cooke at Forest Hills in Semi-Final

New York, Sept. 6 (AP)—The most dramatic of the semi-final matches today in the national tennis championships at Forest Hills is practically certain to be the one between that grand veteran from California, Helen Hull Jacobs, and her long-time rival and Wightman Cup teammate, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke of New York.

It might seem to some folks that it was only yesterday when Helen began her long series of duels with pig-tailed Helen Wills. But that actually was back in the fabulous twenties, and "Helen the second" today is a mature woman of 33.

Yet, so help this possibly biased observer, she lacks so little of being as good as ever that it is more than likely she will be the one to hold out her arms when they start passing the silverware late tomorrow afternoon. That would be No. 5 for a fine campaigner.

Helen must get a bang out of it these days when they announce her matches on the stadium court. The man at the mike customarily tells a little something about each competitor, including his or her record, birthplace and age. But this year he pointedly has left Helen's age out of it. So it must be fun for Helen, under circumstances, to kick the daylights out of the younger generation.

Always noted for her tireless running, Helen seems to have lost little of her stamina. And, if she is a step slower, she makes up for it with uncanny anticipation and a hard, flat forehand drive that she didn't have when she was a youngster.

If she trims Mrs. Cooke today—as she should—then it probably will be Helen against Pauline Betz of Los Angeles in tomorrow's finals. Miss Betz, the tall golden-blonde who was seeded No. 1, should prevail over Margaret Osborne of San Francisco in the other semi-finals.

Of the men's semi-finals, the easier to call appeared to be the one between Bobby Riggs, 1939 champion, and Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif. Riggs looked like a million in trouncing Frankie Parker by 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 yesterday, and he figured to be a few too many for Schroeder, the youngster who is more noted for his ability at doubles.

Tennes, onetime racing news publisher, $10,000 a year will go toward the upkeep of a "character home" for boys known as Camp Honor. His will, on file in probate court today, said Tennes had intended to found such a home during his lifetime.

Will Catch Sunday

Freeman Photo

"WHITEY" KOWALYCK

Kingston's stock in Sunday's game with Saugerties took a drop last night at the stadium when "Whitey" Kowalyck, ace catcher, dropped to the ground in pain when struck just above the knee in the late innings. However, the condition of the Rec receiver is not as serious as first believed. He is expected to be ready to do duty behind the plate tomorrow afternoon. Kowalyck, a favorite with many baseball followers, here, has been signed by the Brooklyn Dodgers and will go south with the club next spring. Kingston loses a good catcher but his chance to advance in organized baseball is the opportunity the young catcher has been working for.

Two Errors Hurt Bill Thomas' Work On Pitching Hill

Miscues by Van Herper and Stoll Help Phillies Gain Win; Saugerties at 3 P. M. Tomorrow

Hanging on the ropes for five innings, the Philadelphia Stars tied up last night's game with the Recreations in the ninth and then went on to win the tussle 7 to 4 with three unearned runs in the 11th inning. Another fine turnout watched the second last Friday evening arclight encounter of the season.

It appeared as though the Recs would even the score with the Quaker team, leading 4 to 2 in the ninth. Then in the 10th Kingston had another chance to win. In the final frame a couple of costly errors and faulty baseball pushed the Phillies out in front with a cluster of three runs.

Thomas Hurls Well

Charlie Neff started on the hill for the Recs and worked the first three innings. He had allowed two hits and a run. His sore arm trouble forced him to give way to Bill Thomas at the start of the fourth. Thomas, throwing with his heart in every pitch, had the Philadelphia club eating out of his hand for five frames, giving up only three hits and another unearned marker.

It was a heartbreaker all the way for Thomas. The former high school pitching sensation didn't show any ill effects of his long bench-warming as he hurled through the strong Negro National League club in fine fashion. Thomas should have been the winning hurler in the 10th when the Recs lost a sure runner when Chuck Yanni, a slow runner, was waved into the plate after he had poked out a long triple into deep right.

The Recs hopped on Edsel Walker, the former Catskill youth, for four runs in the first on one hit. A walk to Sabo, two fielders' choices, an error by Cooper, another pass to VanHerper and Jim Ashdown's looping single into right pushed in four runs.

In the top of the third, singles by Huber and Ducket, and a wild pitch throw in by Charlie Neff, made the count 4 to 1. That ended Neff and Bill Thomas went in.

Run on Error

Walker and Thomas then settled down in a keen pitcher's duel, the former keeping the Recs at bay with the aid of a few twin-killings. The Stars scored their second run in the sixth with the help of Kingston's first error. Huber started the inning off by getting the first hit off Thomas, a hard single through into center. Tiano let the ball go on into deep center and Huber tallied all the way from first to make the score 4 to 2.

A walk, single and an error by Churck Yanni put Thomas in more hot water in the seventh but the veteran hurler came through nicely when Huber bounced out to Van Herper.

In the ninth Thomas seemed on his way to a sure victory when Cooper lofted to Tiano for the initial out. Parnell worked the Recs hurler for a walk and he scored a minute later when West slammed a terrific clout into deep left. Henderson kept the rally alive with another clout into left for a double. Jimmy Ashdown saved it from going any further with a neat stab of it with his bare hand. No more runs scored as the next two batters grounded out to Sabo.

Kingston had a real opportunity in the 10th after Ashdown was retired. Chuck Yanni blasted out his first hit in a couple of games, a smash into right for a triple. Yanni was waved in and was thrown out and that just about threw out Kingston's chances of winning.

Then came the fatal 11th. After Cooper popped out to Coleman, Parnell, after getting a life when his foul dropped unmolested between home and first, lifted a fly in back of short. Van Herper went back and dropped it for an error. Stoll tried to nab Parnell stealing second and the throw went into center for the second error of the inning. Parnell advanced to third. Thomas, playing the odds, walked McHenry. The errors made their presence felt when Henderson slashed a single to left scoring Parnell. McHenry took third. Owen bounced to Sabo and the fielder, trying to get McHenry at the plate, threw badly, allowing the run to come in. Walker slashed a single to left driving in Owen who had taken second on Sabo's toss to the plate. Three runs and the ball game.

The Recs made a threatening gesture in their half in an attempt to atone for the sloppy play as Coleman and Stoll hit singles. However, Walker got through and hung up his second straight win over the Recs.

Charter Members of Woodstock Company

Freeman Photo

Among the more than 600 in attendance at the annual meeting of the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association in Woodstock last evening were three charter members of Woodstock Fire Company No. 1, and all are still active in the company's activities. Left to right they are George W. Riseley, the company's first foreman; Henry Peper, who has been the company's treasurer since it was formed 35 years ago; and B. C. Wells, who has participated through the years in all of the company's activities.

county firemen the guests of Weiner Hose Company.

David Freer of Pine Grove avenue had installed his loud speaker system in the Playhouse for the evening convention and entertainment.

1943 a Danger Year

Frederick Snyder during the course of his address brought out the fact that every day in this country there were 618 fires and pointed out that the year 1943 would prove a dangerous year with a great increase in the number of fires.

The increase in fires would not be due to arson, he said, but to the fact that the heavy increase in taxes would cause property owners to become careless and not take the necessary precautions to make their homes and places of business safe from the danger of a fire breaking out.

The great danger in 1943, said Mr. Snyder, would be indifference and carelessness.

Mr. Snyder said that his hearers should not forget that the roof of the world was now on fire and that we lived under that roof, and that it would be up to this country to end the present crisis that faced the world.

Civilization was not doomed, he said, and Hitler would be defeated.

Emergency Waked Public

Chief Deasy, who had charge of the recent volunteer firemen's training school, said that it took a national emergency to wake the public to the fact that trained firemen were needed. That was the reason why fire schools were now being held throughout the nation.

The fire company with but a single unit of fire fighting apparatus, he said, needed members who knew their job, for they could not depend upon help arriving to assist them in time to save property and lives. A small community was not like New York city where in 13 minutes 45 pieces of apparatus would roll up to a fire.

Today as never before, he said, the need was imperative for volunteer firemen to know the proper methods to be used in fighting fires.

Welcomed Firemen

The convention opened last night with the invocation pronounced by the Rev. Harvey I. Todd of Woodstock, which was followed with the pledge to the flag and the singing of the Star Spangled Banner led by Professor Alexis Sandersen of Woodstock.

The address of welcome was delivered by LaMonte V. Simpkins, a fire commissioner of the town of Woodstock, while the Rev. William R. Peckham of the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, introduced Mr. Snyder, the principal speaker of the evening.

Three Charter Members

The convention was marked by the presence of Henry Peper, B. C. Wells and George W. Riseley, the three living charter members of the Woodstock Fire Company, No. 1, hosts of the county firemen. All three are still active and had taken a part in arranging for this year's convention.

The Woodstock Fire Company was organized on November 5, 1906, and while the county association was celebrating its 6th anniversary this year, the Woodstock Fire Company was observing its 35th year.

The officers of the Woodstock Fire Company are George A. Riseley, president; John Peper, vice president; Henry Peper, treasurer; Birge H. Simmons, secretary; Albert Cashdollar, the retiring county president, chief; R. J. Lapo, and John Helferich, assistant chiefs, and George Reynolds, chief driver.

In Memoriam

During the convention proceedings last night the county firemen stood at attention while Secretary Wynne read the names of the volunteers who had died during 1940-41. Those who had died were James Brown of Kingston Exempts Association; John B. Honeticq of Excelsior Hose; Charles L. Maines of Cornell Hose; John L. Struble of Excelsior Hose; Arthur Waterfall of Kerhonkson Fire Company; William O'Neil of Rapid Hose; Edward P. Kuehn of Weiner Hose, and Robert Terwilliger of Wallkill Hook & Ladder Company.

Gaily Decorated

The convention last night was attended by delegates from practically every fire company in the association, and they motored to Woodstock from all sections of Ulster county.

Among the invited guests were fire officials from Greene and Columbia county, who were introduced by Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy.

Albert Cashdollar, retiring president of the association, presided at the convention, and owing to the length of the program, little business was transacted.

The Woodstock Fire Company exerted itself to make the convention one of the largest and best held in the history of the association, and as the delegates at the close of the meeting assembled in the various eating places where the turkey dinner was served, found that the village had been gaily decorated with the American colors in honor of the convention.

The colorful firemen's parade that marks the closing of the annual convention was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the village.

Sheriff A. F. Molyneaux served as grand marshal, and the officials list of fire units in line were:

An electric iron left on an ironing board in the Mother's Laundry, 500 Wilbur avenue, ignited the board Friday night and caused a still alarm to be sent in to the fire department. The fire was extinguished with a pail of water.

Father Institutes Suit for Custody Of Two Children

Julius Szalay of New York city, formerly of Woodstock, brought an action Friday in special term of Supreme Court for custody of his two children, who have been residing with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Csicsics of Kingston.

The action came on in a habeas corpus proceeding instituted by the father who seeks custody of the two children who are now four and seven years of age. Szalay obtained a decree of divorce in New York city in July.

Joseph Avis appeared for the respondent Goldie Szalay and her parents, Paul and Elizabeth Csicsics. Albert H. Marks appeared for the father.

Szalay, a waiter at the Hotel Taft in New York since he left Woodstock where he was engaged in the restaurant business, testified that he was getting from $35 to $40 a week on his job and lived at 137 West 60th street with his mother in a small apartment. He claims that by the decree of divorce he was to have paid $5 a week for the support of the boys, Julius and Alexander, until the decree was final and then he was to have custody of the children. He claims he has been denied custody which he claims was a provision of the divorce decree.

Questioned as to whether he had seen the boys since he and his wife separated after he claims he had a disagreement with his wife at the home of her parents where he said he and his wife had resided for a short time after their marriage, Szalay was unable to tell just how often or when he had visited the boys. The respondent claimed that he had not shown any great interest in the two small lads and asked that he be denied custody.

The question also arose as to whether the apartment in which he resides in New York was suitable for the bringing up of the boys since it is a small three-room apartment. To this he claimed he would secure a larger home if given the custody of the boys. Mr. Avis also contended that the $5 a week payments had not been met and that therefore custody of the children should not be given the father but they should remain in the grandparents' home here where they have lived since birth.

A vast amount of testimony was taken during the afternoon and the matter was finally adjourned to Albany when the case will be continued on September 19.

Women Bowlers Meet

All women in Kingston who are interested in bowling are urged to attend a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Ladies' League to be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the club rooms. Mrs. John Wilson, president of the league, will preside and discuss plans for the coming year. Last year the Ladies' League was made up of four teams which met regularly at the "Y" for bowling. The "Y" alleys have been thoroughly renovated during the summer and will open Monday, September 29.

Children Are Wed

Mexico City, Sept. 6 (AP)—An 11-year-old girl was married to a boy of 16 in a civil court ceremony today before 80 curious spectators. Mexican law forbids the marriage of girls under 16 except with the consent of their parents, which the court said was obtained in this case.

Water Troughs Beautify Saugerties

Freeman Photo

The water troughs on Lower Partition street and Ulster avenue in the village of Saugerties have been beautified this summer by placing different perennial flowers and creeping vines in the concrete basins. Useful in the days of the horse and buggy they still serve their community as attractive traffic guides. They were planted and are under the supervision of the Society of Little Gardens of Saugerties.

Sanford Reports City Health Off On Cheerful Start

Health Officer Presents Facts on Polio to Aid Local Residents in Keeping on Guard

With no cases of scarlet fever, and only two of whooping cough reported among the pupils in the city's schools, the school year is beginning quite satisfactorily from a communicable disease standpoint, said Dr. L. E. Sanford, city health officer, in a statement issued today.

Dr. Sanford said that now as children are being brought together in large numbers it stands to reason that sooner or later cases of communicable disease will occur.

While infantile paralysis is in the vicinity rather extensively with many cases in New Jersey and New York city, and cases of the disease in Albany, Newburgh and surrounding communities, this city has been extremely fortunate, said Dr. Sanford, in that it has had no cases of the disease reported up to the present time.

It is, however, possible, said Dr. Sanford, that this disease may make its appearance at any time, and I would like at this time to cite some of the known facts concerning it.

Infantile paralysis, said the health officer, is caused by a virus. There is no serum or vaccine which can be given for protection against it. The incubation period is usually short; from five to 10 days as a rule.

The symptoms may vary from the most severe with rapidly fatal results to those so mild that a diagnosis is difficult. As a rule, said Dr. Sanford, the early symptoms are those similar to a cold or grip with fever, headache, nausea, probably vomiting, soreness of the muscles, possibly sore throat. Tiredness and listlessness are apparent. The patient may be nervous and irritable. Pain and stiffness in the muscles of the neck and back may occur so that there is difficulty in bending the head forward.

There is one symptom, however, said Dr. Sanford, that is very prominent and that is the apprehension and fear of being touched or moved in any way.

All of these symptoms may subside, said the health officer, in a day and the patient may be apparently well and the paralysis of the muscles of an arm or leg or other muscles groups may occur in three or four days.

Needless to say, said Dr. Sanford, when any of these symptoms occur, no matter how trivial they may seem your physician should be consulted at once.

Since infantile paralysis is caused by a virus present in the secretions of the nose and throat, said Dr. Sanford, and in the discharges from the bowels of those having the disease, or in healthy carriers, the most that we can do in the way of prevention is to avoid exposure.

This may be very difficult because during an epidemic there may be many carriers or those having the disease in a mild form who spread the disease unintentionally. Therefore prevent unnecessary contact, especially of children with others.

Do not travel with children to cities or communities where the disease exists, advised Dr. Sanford. All cases and suspected cases of infantile paralysis should be promptly reported to the health department and quarantine willingly followed. In this way much may be accomplished in preventing the spread of the disease.

ASSASSIN'S VICTIM

The death of Marcel Gitton, ex-Communist who had turned against his party, from an unidentified assassin's bullet, marked another in a series of shootings and attacks which both French and German authorities have been striving to stop since Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat were wounded at Versailles August 27.

Effects of Environment On Life Being Studied

NEW YORK. — Ecology is the study of the interrelationships of organisms and their environment. It is not only concerned with the effects of the environment on life, but the effects of life on the environment.

The ecology of bacteria is a relatively neglected field, these microbes having been studied most intensively from the medical standpoint, although only about a hundred, or one-thirteenth, of the recognized species cause human disease, writes M. W. Jennison in New England Naturalist. It is no exaggeration to say that bacteria and other microbes play a role in nature so fundamentally important that without them life on the earth literally could not exist.
